The Den - Bolinas Stinson Youth Group

Providing a safe and inspiring space for community building, personal discovery, and peer supported growth in our rural community.

Second Youth Group - 2016/2017

It was a lovely, warm Monday afternoon as the middle schoolers exited the big yellow school bus. They had been on the bus for hours that day. Many complained about the heat and how their field trip to the city found them on the bus for longer then they even got to peruse the MOMA. If only they had actually gotten to walk across the Golden Gate Bridge as they had hoped; but alas, traffic and delays had them needing to get back to West Marin. But, we were all too happy to sit in the shade and share pictures of paintings and sculptures that they found compelling and interesting.

A few students were taking advantage of the beginning of a cooking class meeting around the fabulous cobb oven downtown Bolinas, but Isatta, Marius, Janet, Julia, Jasmin, Symon and our first brave sixth grader, Anwyn, joined us for Youth Group. In our gratitude circle we called out thanks for food, friends, surfing in shorty wetsuits, and of course ice cream. The beach was filled with folks seeking the respite of the cool ocean and everyone promised they would be content to walk in the shallows reigning in the urge to completely submerge in their clothes. In the end a few of us were well splashed, but no one too messy to go to the library. Not much homework had been assigned.

So, everyone entertained themselves with looking at the items in the gallery, legos, magazines and researching on the internet. The Stinson Beach Library is such a pleasant place to get inspired, gather information and explore. Who knew the orchid flower that produces the vanilla bean is only opened for a few hours a year! If it doesn't get pollinated, the flower falls off and it doesn't produce a vanilla pod. If it does, it takes nine months to mature into a pod containing thousands of tiny black seeds. The second most expensive spice in the world:

Kerry, Ruby and Aurora joined us for Parkside Pizza on the basketball court. Heirloom tomato, arugula and pesto was quite a hit. We spoke again in our teen talking circle of how we were kind, how we were brave, and how we failed that day. A number of ladies said they were kind in taking the stairs with Willow at the museum, instead of the elevator. Symon shared that he failed by not protecting his Orangina can at the beach. The seagull attempted to pick up the open can with their beak, spilling it in the sand. After feasting, Lana and Taeya came round to shoot hoops and visit. Everyone enjoyed a refreshing beverage from The Market while we waited for The Stage.

"PLUTOCRACY", THE MUSICAL TO DEBUT IN BOLINAS

Coming up in two weeks: the premier of my new musical show, "Plutocracy"--Friday night, Oct. 21, in Bolinas, and Sunday night, Oct. 23, at the Point Reyes Dance Palace.

The fine six-member cast features two Bolinas people: that classy songstress Beth Carusillo plays the hero's feisty girlfriend, and Bob Scott--he of the deep sonorous voice!--is the show's narrator. (Bob is also very funny as a conservative Southern senator.)

Also in the cast: Daniel Patrick, the Stinson impressario, whom many of you know from Common Voice Choir; Tim Mayer of San Francisco, who was a favorite in my previous musical show, "By George, It's War!" (satirizing the Bush administration); an amazing operatic tenor, Peter Webb of San Leandro; and the soulful contralto Madeline London of San Rafael.

Almost three years in the writing, "Plutocracy" pits a young hippy poet against a giant global oil corporation.

Choreography is by the popular Marin choreographer and dance teacher Doree Clark, who choreographed "By George, It's War!"

I'm pleased to be making Bolinas the premier of this show, which will also play in Berkeley at La Pena, and in San Francisco at the Noe Valley Ministry.

::REVISED EDITION::

He's done it again! Dale Polissar, Bolinas's own composer/musician/political gadfly, famed for his musical satire of the Bush administration, "By George, It's War!" has now turned his eye on the international oil industry and its impact on the fate of the earth. "Plutocracy" tells the tale of a young, hippy poet who inherits his father's status as head of a global oil & power corp. Corruption and money in politics, financial inequality, racism, global warming, all are grist for the musical mill. 10/11/16

Listen in on KWMR next Tuesday (10/11) at 11 am, when Dale will join in conversation with me on Questioning: Where Is the Path, to discuss his most recent opus.

The Torn Flag by Pete Seeger (1969)

At midnight in a flaming angry town
I saw my country's flag lying torn upon the ground.
I ran in and dodged among the crowd,
And scooped it up, and scampered out to safety.
And then I took this striped old piece of cloth
And tried my best to wash the garbage off.
But I found it had been used for wrapping lies.
It smelled and stank and attracted all the flies.
While I was feverishly at my task,
I heard a husky voice that seemed to ask:
Do you think you could change me just a bit?
Betsy Ross did her best, but she made a few mistakes.

My blue is good, the color of the sky.
The stars are good for ideals, oh, so high.
Seven stripes of red are strong to meet all danger; But those white stripes: they, they need some changing.
I need also some stripes of deep, rich brown,
And some of tan and black, then all around
A border of Gods gracious green would look good there.
Maybe you should slant the stripes, then I'd not be so square.
I woke and said, What a ridiculous story.
Don't let anybody say I suggested tampering with Old Glory. But tonight its near midnight, and in another flaming town Once again I hear my country's flag lies torn upon the ground.

My apologies
 To all of you
 For whom the word prayer has been used as a weapon
 Or an excuse
 Or a lie
 But I'm taking prayer back
 I'm tired of intention
 And meditation being misused
 To describe the act
 Of speaking with your heart and spirit
 I pray
 I pray
 I pray when I smoke
 May my prayers rise with this smoke
 I pray when I drink water
 May this water be blessed with my prayer
 I pray when I sit in a circle with the medicine woman
 A ho
 I pray when sage burns
 Clear this space for my prayer
 I pray when the sandalwood beads slip through my hands
 Om mane padme hum
 I pray when I witness a being achieve death
 May you be peaceful in this transition
 I pray
 When I see a church
 As we forgive those who trespass against us
 I pray when it rains
 Lehua blossom
 And yes I have intention that crafts my time and space
 And of course I meditate with quiet mind
 But I also pray
 I pray
 I pray for a release from suffering for us all
 I pray for clear understanding
 For clear water
 For clear paths
 That lead to a more sure and natural place among the world

Notes from two weeks on tour with Real Estate in the Midwest ...

It's a weird and delicate time to be traveling through America's heartland.. Confederate flags are more disconcerting than usual when they fly next to oversized TRUMP banners. It's wild to get out of the liberal bubble and see first hand that this aggressive ideology is alive and well out here. The people don't seem dangerous at all, but the ideas do. The land is so beautiful. Traveling on back roads from Indiana to Illinois to Nebraska - the leaves along the gently sloping hillsides are just starting to turn - something I miss about the east.

Out here I can feel the lasting energetic impressions of horse drawn carriages and booming industry from days gone by. It's never been more apparent to me that time itself is not inherently linear, it only seems that way. Tom Constanten said that music is going on all the time. You don't begin to make it so much as enter it, you don't end it so much as leave it. I've been trying to keep that in mind when I get on stage every night.

Been missing Bolinas terribly, as I tend to whenever I have to leave for a few weeks. Still, it's nice to be out on the road. Sending love to West Marin....
