Bolinas Museum
Opening Reception
& Holiday Party

Saturday November 17th 3-5 PM

Join us for the opening of three new exhibitions, including in the Main Gallery, the 24th Annual Mini Show. More than eighty Bay Area artists are invited to participate. Some are nationally known; more than half are from Coastal Marin, and most usually work in large format. But for the Mini Show no artwork can be bigger than six inches! Sculpture, ceramics, delicate wooden bowls, paintings that range from abstract to landscapes, and more. Best of all, for the holidays, the work is for sale, as a benefit for the Museum and artists.

The Photography Gallery features, Slapstick: Vintage Hollywood Cinema Photography from the Robert Flynn Johnson Collection, which includes wonderful images of early movie stars and the humor and imagination that was used before "special effects" defined our movie experiences.

Robert Flynn Johnson has had a long and distinguished career in the arts. Following his appreciation of classic cinema, Johnson has developed his own extensive private collection of vintage cinema photographs dating Hollywood's "Golden Era." Johnson says, "The decision to organize this thematic focused exhibition out of my diverse and extensive collection of cinema photography was simple. In the aftermath of the contentious 2012 elections that had gone on for far too long this year, I felt that regardless of who won or lost, we all now need a good laugh."

Johnson will give a FREE gallery talk at the Bolinas Museum, "Collecting Vintage Photography," on December 1st at 2PM.

In the Museum's Coastal Marin Artists Gallery, Fire & Clay presents the work of ten accomplished local ceramicists. The exhibition will surprise and delight visitors with the variety of wildly playful, unexpected, innovative and elegant creations. From moon-white porcelain to a book of ceramic pages and floating eggs!

Continuing exhibitions include Selections from the Museum's Permanent Collection featuring works from the historical paintings from the 1800s to more contemporary prints and photographs and 37 Years of our Natural Wastewater Management in the History Room, which explores the story of how water and wastewater fomented a revolution in the town's politics and reset the direction of Bolinas. It explains the town's local high tech water source and non-chemical sewage system. It also features the men and women who maintain the systems 24/7 and do whatever it takes, however long it takes, to make sure the systems run so smoothly, we take it for granted.

Join us for this holiday party, enjoy food, fun and meet the exhibiting artists!

EPITAPH

Wish him Fair Winds and Following Seas.

During the Great Depression,
when physicians made house calls,
a placard was placed on the office door
with the following four words:

The Doctor is Out

John Doss, physician, epidemiologist, Master of Public Health, mariner, photographer, poetaster, veteran WWII, world traveler, husband, father, grandfather, and great grandfather, died peacefully in his sleep on November 4, 2012 at the age of 89.

He was born in Chicago, Illinois on March 30, 1923 and was raised in the suburbs to the west of Chicago. John grew up poor and came of age during the Great Depression, endowed with the values of most of the people of the Greatest Generation: work hard, live within your means, honor the family, and do well by your neighbors. He learned to live by the mantras of that time: "Charity begins at home," and, "A penny saved is a penny earned." He learned the frugal way and the safety of mattress money.

John started working at 10 years of age as a newspaper delivery boy and sold enough subscriptions to The Saturday Evening Post to win a Schwinn bicycle. During his high school years he caddied and was a houseboy at the Oak Park Country Club in Oak Park, Illinois.

He was enrolled at Illinois Wesleyan University in Bloomington, Illinois, studying pre-med and playing basketball when World War II broke out.

He served in the United States Maritime Service and trained as pharmacist mate/purser at Sheepshead Bay, N.Y. On completion of training at Sheepshead Bay, he went by train to San Francisco and signed on as purser-pharmacist mate on the Liberty Ship, SS Frank C. Emerson, when she was launched from the Kaiser Shipyards in Richmond, California. The voyage took him on a circumnavigation of the earth in his twenty-first year. After docking in New York City on June 11, 1944, he returned to San Francisco by train to complete the circumnavigation.

Doctor Doss then returned to the Pacific Theater and made a port of call in Honolulu, Hawaii, as pharmacist mate/purser on the SS John Ross, another Liberty Ship. He returned to San Francisco and was reassigned to a new ship, a diesel electric powered vessel, the MV Cape Lopez. Doctor Doss was in Naha Harbor, Okinawa when hostilities ceased. The Lopez returned to Seattle, Washington and was immediately loaded with cargo for the west coast of South America.

John quit the sea, resumed premedical studies at Illinois Wesleyan in 1947, and married his life companion, Margot Patterson, a freelance writer/journalist who was working in Chicago as the Midwest editor of Seventeen Magazine.

When John started his medical studies at The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in 1948, Margot continued her journalist career writing for the Baltimore Sun Magazine Metrograve.

The first year at Hopkins was enlivened by the birth of their first son Richard. Margot and many returning Vets from WWII organized a young group of mothers and students known as "married with children." They started a clothes bank passing down baby clothes as new babies came along. Margot came up with the expression about working medical students and their wives, "We were so poor that we had to wash out our Kleenex."

John graduated with a Medical Degree from The Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore, Maryland in 1952. An internship at Harriet Lane Home was the high point of his training at The Johns Hopkins Hospital. During this internship a second son Alexander (Sandy) was born.

After internship John trained as an Epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and the Epidemic Intelligence Service (EIS) in Atlanta, Georgia. He served as an epidemiologist at the CDC Field Station in Kansas City, Kansas, traveling all through the middle west tracking an epidemic of polio during the early vaccine trials in 1953. Doctor Doss also served as an epidemiologist in 1954 with the State of California Health Department in Berkeley.

Doctor Doss completed a pediatric residency at Stanford University Hospital, San Francisco, 1955-1956, during which their third son John (Jock) arrived. Eighteen months later a fourth son Gordon completed the family. John started his medical practice with the Permanente Medical Group in San Francisco, California as a staff pediatrician. After 14 years of pediatric practice, John took leave from this practice and joined the San Francisco City Clinic and the County Health Department during a syphilis epidemic.

Doctor Doss, his wife Margot, and their four sons settled in San Francisco and bought a Victorian townhouse on Russian Hill. Doctor John installed a photo lab and Margot continued her journalistic career, writing a column called "San Francisco at Your Feet," that appeared in the Sunday Magazine Section of the San Francisco Chronicle. These writings were collected and published in six books, San Francisco at Your Feet; Bay Area at Your Feet; Golden Gate Park at Your Feet; Paths of Gold; There, There; and A Walkers Year Book. Doctor John did the photography.

In 1974, John served as a consultant epidemiologist for the World Health Organization Small Pox Eradication Programme in India. He departed San Francisco for New Delhi, India, where he searched out and contained small pox outbreaks in villages in the Districts of Patna, Ranchi, Dunbar, and Singhbhoom in Bihar State. He toured India and explored New and Old Delhi, Agra and the Taj Mahal, Madras, Bangalore, and Bombay with Margot after completing his WHO service in India. He returned to do a second term of service for WHO's Small Pox Eradication Programme in Bangladesh in 1975. From 1976 until 1990 Doctor Doss was a primary care physician in San Francisco's Chinatown and served with the North East Medical Services (NEMS). John domiciled in American Samoa for two years as Director of Maternal and Child Health at the LBJ Tropical Medical Center, between 1982 and 1984.

The Doss Family started going to Bolinas in the mid 60's renting houses for summer vacation time for the family, bought property in 1968, became involved in the bourgeois/bohemian atmosphere of San Francisco and West Marin, and became members of the art and writer folk called bobos. A book titled Bobos in Paradise by David Brooks described the new developing demographic in the year 2000.

Doctor John and family were very active in Marin County, San Francisco, California, and federal politics, engaging in freeway fights and participating in environmental showdowns. (John was hung in effigy for calling out the Bolinas Public Utilities District (BPUD) for dumping raw sewage into the Bolinas Lagoon.) The Doss family went on peace marches, was friends to the Beat poets, and partook of most of the bohemian life that Northern California offered. John and Margot were board members to Actors Workshop and were very active in the San Francisco Mid Century Poetry Renaissance. They hosted many poetry events at their home and Margot was known as the "Den Mother to the Beat Poets."

During the turbulent 1960s the Doss family became involved with the counter culture scene happening in the Haight-Ashbury: The Digger Communication Company's pamphleteering, free food distribution, the Free Store at Cole and Carl called "A Trip Without A Ticket." In addition, John was involved in the beginnings of the Haight-Ashbury Free Clinic.

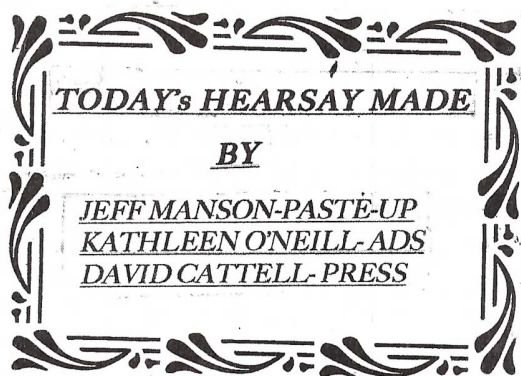

After 34 years of living in San Francisco, the Russian Hill townhouse was sold and the Doss family retired to their dream home in Bolinas, 1988.

In his retirement years Doctor John wrote a fictional memoir about life in American Samoa titled, Uli'uli Masina (Black Moon) or Where the Hell is Pago Pago. Doctor John's poetastery was published in: On the Mesa, an Anthology of Bolinas Writing, City Lights Books (1971), and he wrote many geezer rants that appeared in the Bolinas Hearsay News.

Doctor Doss's photographs appeared in: I, Remain, Lew Welch's letters; Hey Lew, a festschrift by Magda Cregg and friends; The Paper Propeller, by Arthur Okamura; Tricycle (The Buddhist Review) fall of 1995; Big Sky Mind: Buddhism and the Beat Generation; San Francisco Chronicle (1961-1964) under the nom de lens of D'Argent, Calli; and illustration photographs for: Pacific Discovery, Country Magazine, ASU Travel Guide, Oceans, and Pacific Magazine.

He was predeceased by his wife of 55 years in 2003 and is survived by his son and daughter-in-law Richard and Annika Doss of San Francisco, son and daughter-in-law Alexander and Elaine Doss of Nicasio, son and daughter-in-law John and Debra Kay Doss of Carpinteria, son Gordon Doss of San Rafael, three grandchildren and their spouses: Bonnie Martin Huston and her husband Aaron of Gig Harbor, Washington, Gus Loren step grandson and his wife Estelle of New York City, and grandson Alex Durando Doss and his wife Teal of New Orleans; two great-grandsons, Andrew Huston and Grant Huston and great-granddaughter Elsie Leah Huston of Gig Harbor, Washington.

A memorial will be held for friends to come with a dish of food and memories of John to share at the Doss home on Horseshoe Hill in Bolinas on Sunday November 25 from 1:00 to 4:00 pm. Memorial donations can be made in John Doss's name to the Coastal Health Alliance (www.coastalhealth.net)

Poet Bob Holman
Performance and Conversation with Michael Lerner

Bob Holman is an American poet and poetry activist, most closely identified with the oral tradition, the spoken word, and slam poetry. As a promoter of poetry in many media, Holman has spent the last four decades working variously as an author, editor, publisher, performer, emcee of live events, director of theatrical productions, producer of films and television programs, record label executive, university professor, poet's house proprietor, and archivist.

Dubbed "Ringmaster of the Spoken Word" (NY Daily News), "Poetry Czar" (Village Voice), and "Dean of the Scene" (Seventeen Magazine), he studied poetry at Columbia where he now teaches: he finds it fulfilling, becoming the guy he used to laugh at (he also teaches at NYU).

The Loud-Mouth (A Close Escape)

You're playing your first gig in this restaurant when
He joins a table just behind your chair--
His booming voice directly in your ear.
"How's the man?!--Jimmy, Pete, what's up?!"

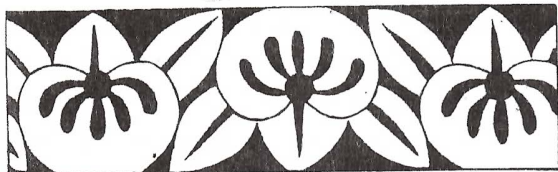

You're playing a soft and gentle song, a ballad,
"Here's That Rainy Day", your clarinet
Gliding subtly through the lovely tune,
While at your ear this raucous big baboon
Is yukking it up as if you were not there.

How could anyone be so unaware?
You've just about reached your limit, ready to turn
And tell the guy, "I'm trying to play some music!"
(This--you are schooled--a musician never does.
The etiquette of the restaurant requires
That you swallow your pride...if you want to be rehired!)
Still, you have reached your limit--let the chips
Fall where they may--you turn to have your say.

Just then the big guy rises--"Pablo, hey!--"
He calls out to the bartender, "Bring these guys
Another round", and he goes off to chide
A waiter for some gaff. You realise,
As he moves lordly among the staff, that he
Whose voice had graced the whorls of your ears
Is the very man whose name this restaurant bears.

Your pride is unassuaged. But any rate,
You'll live to play another day. A close escape.

DANNY VITALI & BRIAN LAIDLAW

Local musician, Danny Vitali, and Minneapolis-based songwriter, Brian Laidlaw with a grant from the Minnesota State Arts Board are producing a new album called Echotalia. The album re-imagines the myth of Echo and Narcissus in the mining town of Hibbing, Minnesota, and draws inspiration from the high-school relationship that took place there between Bob Dylan and Echo Helstrom (a.k.a. "The Girl From the North Country"). With Laidlaw's incisive lyrics and Vitali's expansive musical arrangements, the duo's sound has echoes of Simon and Garfunkel, Leonard Cohen, and of course, Dylan himself. Vitali, a former resident of Hibbing, has been making music with Laidlaw for the last two years; this will be their second album together. The album is set for release this winter, this is a very special pre-release performance.

IMPORTANT UPDATE!

Last Wednesday's Hearsay News (Nov. 14th), in our letter to thank everyone for our benefit at the BCC, I forgot to mention some very important things i.e. the amount given by all your generous hearts $1,760.00!! WOW! THANK YOU!. How could I forget K.O.? (Kathleen O'Neill). She designed the beautiful posters!, (the picture on top of the poster was taken on our wedding day, 40 years ago!). I now have the names of those tending the bar: Maitreya, Adam, Jeff Manson, Vanessa, & Max, thank you! Don Smith, (the "everready helper") brought all the wood for the fire, then Albert took over & built a blazing one, & continued maintaining it throughout the night, so welcoming on a chilly evening! Thanks Albert & Don! Last but not least, Jane Mickelson (who was not able to attend) donated all the trail mix snacks on the tables. Our granddaughter, Isabella, asked for the job of filling the sunflower bowls and lighting the small candles... so our whole family participated in the event. The Community Center is the HEART of our community, and it beats strong and full of LOVE. PEACE, LOVE, AND UNITY!

READING TO JOHN

On Tues. 11/20 on at 10 am on KWMR (89.9)
 I'll read Sarah Orne Jewett's "A White Heron."
 Sylvy, 9, is a transplanted city girl who's shy but loves the company of forest creatures. She comes across a young ornithologist who hopes she'll lead him to a rare bird. In a stunning denouement, Sylvy reverts to her silent self and makes a decision
 well beyond her years. I'll also share some reviews.
