Breathing Deeply the Medicine of Bolinas~

Calling Yogis, Yoginis, and Wannabe-inis:

The earth, wind, and water circulating around Bolinas creates a unique environment to practice Yoga and Meditation in. There are subtle (and not so subtle!) energies that offer up tasty openness and increased circulation of life through our own bodies. When aligned with motivations to benefit the hearts, minds, and souls of all beings, this practice can taste like nectar to our senses.

Through love for guiding simple and basic flows, emphasizing breath and meditative awareness of body sensation, circulation, and alignment, I will offer a Yoga Ocean Flow Class, beginning Thursday, March 14th, 8-9:30 AM at the Bolinas Community Center. Drop in rate is $10-15, multi-class passes are also available.

Jody Marks is Certified at the 300 hour level in Chakra Yoga and continues studying indigenous ways of remembering, Tibetan Buddhism, Kashmiri Shaivism, Ayurveda, AcroYoga, and ShadowYoga. She incorporates pranayama, asana, and meditation into chakra-balancing Tibetan Yoga, which increases circulation through inner chakras and expands the capacity to experience living energies in plants, animals, and minerals in the surrounding lands. Her main teachers are Scott Blossom (Shadow Yoga & Ayurveda), Lama Tsultrim Allione, and Chandra Easton (Tibetan Meditation-Goddess lineage).

Some things People Said on 3/6

at the Peoples Store

- While pouring his coffee Chuck A. Was reminiscing about diners. He and his friends used to go bowling into the wee hours and then hang out in a diner til dawn. Juke boxes and good food.
- We have ginormous Juicy strawberries
- Albert & Sha-Sha are in the historical trading town of Galle in Sri Lanka
- Heard there was a film crew making a music video up on the Mesa. Generator, huge lights and all going late into the night.
- Rumor, Epsom salts are hard to come lately.
- Kids were appearing in colorful striped clothes. Turns out it was pajama day at school. One kid came up to the register & said, sincerely, "These are my Pajamas"
- Thanks to Christine Cunha for suggesting we order "the best coconut water." We got it, & it IS good...
- I asked Big Rick what he was making with all the produce he was buying. He makes a fresh juice almost every morning. Here's the recipe. 1 med. beet, 1/2 apple, 1/4 orange, a stock of celery, a clove of garlic, thumb size of ginger cut in half, handful of blueberries, 3 strawberries, 1/2 a kiwi and one giant carrot or 3 or 4 small ones. He whips it up in a Jack LaLane Juicer. This makes about a cup. Sometimes he makes it twice in a morning and shares it with his neighbor Bob Scott. Beets are detoxifying but they don't care for the beet tops. He has been drinking this for about two years now. No bananas in it because it's not a smoothie.
- Charlie Would like to review the ice -tray -filling -procedure. It is frustrating for him when he wants to ice- the- broccoli that often times he finds the little reservoirs empty or worse half empty. Luckily Patty Bradford was there to witness the demonstration. He tipped the tray at a thirty degree angle and showed how to pour the water into the top and let it cascade down filling each compartment
- Patty says half an ice cube is perfect to add to her green tea in the morning when she just can't wait

Bolinas Museum New Exhibitions Opening Reception Sat. March 9 3-5PM

In the main gallery: Cross Pollination: Molas & Huipils from the of Sandy Dierks

This is an exhibition of richly colored and beautifully crafted textiles by women artisans from two ancient Mesoamerica cultures. Molas are wildly inventive panels and blouses created by Kuna people from their autonomous region in Eastern Panama. Huipils are woven and worn by Mayan women in Guatemala, just as their pre-Columbian ancestors did. These textiles exemplify centuries of cultural cross pollination with other nations and the inventive adaptation of new ideas into traditional crafts, sometimes with startling results

Sandy Dierks, a Bolinas resident, textile artist and educator, began collecting Kuna and Mayan textiles in the 1960s while she was in art school. Her passion for traditional textiles and learning techniques applicable to making pictorial quilts led Sandy to take many trips to Guatemala, and Panama where she established long term friendships with Kuna families.

In 1976 Sandy moved from Los Angeles to Bolinas and married artist and organic farmer Dennis Dierks. Several young Kuna men have stayed at the Dierk's farm, Paradise Valley Produce, to learn different ideas about agriculture. Sandy regularly travels back to Central America to document textile techniques, see friends and help advocate for protection of the Kuna and the Mayan way of life.

In the Coastal Marin Artists gallery: Beyond the Water's Edge: Dan McCormick.

interdisciplinary artist and design professional working in sculptural installation, environmental design and ecological restoration. McCormick and his wife artist Mary O'Brien create environmental projects and exhibit nationwide. This exhibition includes McCormick's paintings that capture moods of water and land and inventive sculptures of boats that traverse between them.

For 23 years Coastal Marin environs have been McCormick's extended studio as he creates ephemeral organic sculpture to heal eroding land and waterways. Students at West Marin Elementary School in Point Reyes Station participated in McCormick's projects with hands-on learning in biology, mathematics, art, group co-operation and gaining a personal relationship to their own watershed.

In the photography gallery: Of Golden Light: Orotone Re-Envisioned Photographs by Patty Mulligan.

Berkeley photographer Patty Mulligan's unique process creates luminous landscapes that often blur the distinction between photography and painting. Inspired by the work of Edward Curtis, Mulligan prints on glass plates, which she then backs in gold. The resulting streams, vineyards, and treescapes glow with warmth and become almost 3-dimensional as the viewer looks through glass to the image and gold on the reverse

Take me out to the ballpark...

Spring is here – and so is Bolinas baseball! This year, we have a T-ball team and a Farm team, and best of all: They'll be playing in Bolinas on Saturdays and Sundays for the next two months! T-ball starting on Saturday March 23 at 10am and Farm this coming Sunday at 3pm. Please consult your Hearsay for weekly game times.

For all home games, we'll run a fully stocked snack shack, so stop by, grab a hotdog or some freshly popped popcorn, and help cheer on our kids – they're all getting very excited about the season opener. There'll be no jet fly over, but maybe a helicopter..

See you there!

Mette McCall

READING TO JOHN

On Tues. 3/12 at 10 am on KWMR (89.9)
I'll read Eudora Welty's "A Worn Path."
Phoenix, aptly named, has been making this hero's journey through the woods for years, despite her advanced age and the rigors of the road. Rural Mississippi long ago, simple yet radiant prose from this great Southern writer. I'll also catch up on what I've been reading recently via reviews (there's a big backlog just waiting to share.)

STORY NIGHT AT THE LIBRARY

Tuesday night's fantastic 7x7 story event at the library offered a unique opportunity to get inside the minds of some of our neighbors & friends. The event was totally packed & Van & I squeezed in the back by the Social Sciences section. Stuart wanted to know if the audience should applaud or not &, after some deliberation, it was decided that yes we should do what we feel: hoot, yell, whatever.

Sponsored by the Library Improvement Society, the event used the Spark Storytelling format in which people tell true, 7 minute stories on stage. As the event's organizer, Jane Silva said, "I thought it would be perfect for a small, local gathering of Bolinas folks on a winter's evening."

The theme of transitions & transformations of one type or another emerged in all the stories, which varied from poignant, to humorous to philosophical. With Charlie Docherty's watercolor paintings hanging on the bookshelf behind the "stage" one by one, members of our community came up & shared their stories.

Neshama Franklin offered a wry tale of teen-aged hijinks, which ultimately led to life-long love.

Jane Mickelson beautifully described a litany of friend-types, some like persimmons, some like chocolate, sharing a heart-felt account of caring for her friend Betty at the end of her life.

Michael Rafferty, looking dapper in yellow tie & denim blazer, listed, to humorous effect, his wildly mixed bag of jobs, projects, gigs & skills over decades in Bolinas.

Ana Gade regaled us with an adventure story of traveling empty dirt roads in the Middle East in the summer of '66 & pushing her volkswagon into Iran.

Jane Silva vividly recollected an early job operating the elevator at the Kennedy Center & giving a ride to Gerald & Betty Ford, painting all the details of a young person.

Lawrence DeStasi spun a yarn about trying to keep a low-profile during his early days as a college professor, & his reputation as a radical sneaking out nonetheless, moral of the story being, "Who you really are, always comes through"

Kerry Livingstone's told us about her mother & mother in-law's 2 very different, but both very fitting transistions out of life, vividly describing their spirits as pink, purple swirls and golden dots.

Stuart wrapped up the night, also in a tie, with a true story of a Goddess Vision at the end of Poplar in 1987, no shadows, love & the power of the divine feminine.

After the show, we lingered drinking tea & swapping even more as the sky erupted in a much needed windy dramatic rain storm. We are a town with lots of stories. I look forward to hearing the next one, whether in the Library or on the street.
