It's time again for our annual

'Floating Sun Festival' and Baby Blessing, Sunday, June 1.

I've been involved with this pageant in varying capacities for over thirty years and have borne witness to many of its extraordinarily breath-taking moments. Whether seen as an active participant or as a spectator, it has been an event full of amazement and surprises for all. Wonders have abounded, such as the 'mud people,' arising like zombies to an astonished crowd from full burial beneath the sand – or the 'bird people' flying down to the water's edge, suspended from a cable stretched tight from the top of the cliff. Then there was the enormous nest cradling a powder-blue dinosaur egg, all set alarmingly ablaze to give birth to a triumphant phoenix rising from the ashes.... 'eagle man' on his white-winged Pegasus appears like a white cloud from far down the beach... a busty, laughing Cleopatra reclines on a fruit-and-flower-laden canopied palanquin, swaying through town carried on the shoulders of muscled, oiled, bronzed manservants... bare-breasted dakini goddesses, putting an end to the soldier's warring, by their dance, by their beauty, by their truth ... A lumbering lusty 'green man' stalks and paces... kachina dancers herald the advent of modern-day Bolinas in the wake of massive oil spilled on our shores... a majestic 'sun king', sails in from across the waters, steps from his shallow floating craft, poised, posing and presiding over all... oh yes, we've had our day in the sun.

As years trundle by, youthful vigor refines itself to less physically demanding expressions of beauty, of myth, of art. The grandiosity subsides, giving way to a gentler, but no less significant ceremony – perhaps in fact, the very heart of it all, the baby's blessing. That a pagan priest, conducting a fully secular and very humanistic greeting of our new children is an ordained methodist minister is a wonder in itself – the blessing is of being in the enveloping presence of all the sacred elements that surround us, that we live by and with, every day. Pure water is drawn from our reservoir that supplies the town, a few drops to the forehead, a hoisting to the sky, a shout out of welcome, and the new-born, (or child of any age) is then naturalized into Bolinas, the town that exists in its own realm, as we float aloof, detached from its neighboring nation by fissures both physical and philosophical, an island drifting in the placid and raging waters of a sheltering sea...

Yes, yes, very good – but we miss the pomp, the gods, the goddesses and ogres of days gone by who have populated our sands and paraded through town, through the town to a secluded, elevated meadow from where nothing could be seen but swaying grasses and trees and the flags and banners flying high, very high above our erected stages, banquet tables, totem pole, grease pole and balance beam, and the giant Celtic Maypole towering above it all...

It's now a call going out, a search for virile youth, ones who will pick up the torch, who will fly the flags and manifest their own myths buried not too deep – after all, some sort of muse brought us all here – this is not Silicon Valley. Come if you please to our 'Floating Sun Revival and Slide Show of Fading Memories' evening at the Community Center– lets see if new energy can produce new visions, renewed enthusiasm for a vital tradition that is truly tottering on the brink of extinction. No joke. See you there.

-Ananda

FAULTLINE INSTITUTE

“And, so, what is Faultline Institute, anyway?”

To those of you who don't know, here's the scoop:

Faultline Institute is a place of higher learning. As in all “real” learning, it can take place anywhere. For us, it will be around town in Bolinas. At the school, the firehouse, or other, as yet undetermined locations (homes, halls, beach, trees, etc.). The idea behind Faultline is that lifelong learning is important to us all and adds richness to our lives. We all have much to teach and much to learn from each other.

Faultline Institute began in 1973 by a bunch of renegade intellectuals who thought adult education, taught locally, was a good idea. It was originally part of the Adult Education Program of the Tamalpais High School District, serving West Marin. One of the original descriptions reads as follows: “The classes are taught by residents from the towns of Bolinas and Stinson Beach, making the idea of community-teaching-itself a reality. Most classes are skill or project oriented, rather than degree or grade oriented.” Faultline, over the years, has surfaced and re-surfaced and now, has surfaced again. It keeps coming back because it IS still a good idea and has benefited many people in many ways, over the years.

Initially, there was a registration fee for classes. Now there is none. The only fee for classes is determined and collected by the instructor. Michael Rafferty and I will manage the administrative stuff (like arranging spaces, classes, and teachers). Marc-Corea Sanchez is managing the catalogue of information and description of classes on-line.

The first summer session of this Faultline Institute will run from June 15 – August 15. If you are interested in teaching a class, please contact us before May 15, 2014. After that date, we will be assembling a catalog that will be sent to all box holders in Bolinas and Stinson. Please be prepared to tell us what you would like to teach, where, when, how. Think about the fees you would charge per class. The teacher will determine the number of meetings per class. In other words, it can be a one-time lecture, a weekly session, or pre-arranged dates within the session's time limits. Whatever configuration of classes that works best for what is taught will be approved.

Please let us know as soon as possible if you are interested in teaching and becoming part of this long and rich history. We are really excited about this and look forward to talking to a lot of you about Faultline.

KNOW YOUR BO

Bolinas, in addition to the modern spelling, has also been spelled Ballenas, Baulenas, Baulinas and Baulenas. In 1888, Hubert H. Bancroft wrote that the name comes from the Spanish for whale. In 1971, Erwin G. Gudde wrote that it referred to the Native Americans who lived here, but concluded "its meaning is no longer determinable."

WATER SUPPLY UPDATE April 26, 2014

As of today, Bolinas has received approximately 16 inches of rain thus far this rainfall year as measured at 270 Elm Road (and approximately 22.5 inches of rain as measured at the Woodrat Treatment Plant at 400 Mesa Road). Although the rainfall totals remain below normal, the rains of February and March were extremely beneficial for our local water supply. Our emergency reservoirs, Woodrat 1 and Woodrat 2, are now overflowing whereas they had been at nearly 50% capacity in January; even more importantly, the stream flows in our preferred water source, the Arroyo Hondo creek, have recovered from their alarming low levels in January. As a result, at its regularly scheduled monthly meeting in April, after an extensive discussion, the BCPUD Board of Directors voted unanimously to lift the Heightened Voluntary Conservation Alert it had imposed in January 2014.

Although the heightened voluntary conservation alert has been lifted for now, the BCPUD reminds all customers that this district has a very limited water supply in the best of years, and every effort you make now to conserve will help us to manage this limited supply for the benefit of the community. The BCPUD further cautions that as the Spring and Summer months progress, the district will be guided by its Water Conservation and Dry Year Water Use Reduction Program and the BCPUD Board may determine that the heightened voluntary conservation alert (or even mandatory rationing) must be imposed again. Thank you for all that you do to be aware of your water use, to conserve to the extent possible, and to reduce all water waste.

We will keep you apprised via updates in the Hearsay News and on our website: www.bcpud.org.

Thanks to everyone!

The Gods Said "Just Kidding"

What a gorgeous wildflower spring this year has turned out to be. After giving us a taste of one of the worst droughts in recorded history, the gods said, "Just kidding," and sent us enough rain to encourage annual wildflowers and make the perennials sing!

Wildflowers are the complicated phenomenon that are the piece de resistance for California's unique ecology. It has been my irksome task every spring to go viewing wildflowers in as many parts of California as possible.

One thing I love about traveling in California is the way that each part illuminates every other part, with all the differences and similarities – of latitude, soil, elevation, exposure, rainfall, etc. Many genera, such as the clarkias and phacelias, have species unique to each part of California.

This year, we went to the Carrizo Plain, though we had been told in advance that "There is nothing!" in regards to wildflowers. However, we found it to be "A Far Cry from Nothing." (name of current blog) Then we headed to Mendocino county, which has had ample late rains and was stunning. West Marin, as many of you probably know, is definitely holding its own as well.

This and other aspects of growing California's native plants in your home garden, outside your front door, will be discussed on Saturday during the tour from 1:30 -2:30 pm. Available as well will be a broad selection of 4" pots of annual & Perennial wildflowers, our amazing selection of seeds, incredible Books & tools, and a selection of edible native foods! Different ones Every Saturday!

If you can't make it this Saturday, then join us for the next in the series of our Month of Saturdays including the Saturdays of May 3, May 10, and May 17.

FROM VICKISA: I am back from New Orleans- and it was unbelievable, honestly. There was so much GREAT music, food, sugar, drinks, so many encounters, and people. They said 733,000 (I am sure more) at the French Quarter Festival. It was totally amazing. Perfect weather. The day after the festival a huge thunderstorm that we got to watch rolled in it was a real gully washer and day of rest. Classic Café De Monde beignet stop.

The Vickisa Experience - You now have 14 days to go see my show so go!!!! I know you've heard a lot about what I am doing but I really hope you won't miss it. May 4th is the closing day and there's a salon for anybody that wants to come and see the artwork for the last time and talk about art with Laurie Sturtevant and Jessica Eastburn and me. I am interested in how you know when something is finished and anything else that comes up. You're all invited. Gallery Route One is open every day 11 to 5 except Tuesday. I will be there April 24th and May 1 working 11 to 5. 663-1347 and I hope you enjoy it. But enough about me as Goldie would have said. Keep me posted on what you're doing

If you cant make it a lot of the work is on my website <http://vickisa.com> Look under the Vickisa Experience .

Back in Bolinas- It was also truly unique to me I took my dog on the beach for the first time after the return and cavorting out at sea in long rows were these amazing Sea lions, giant, there were also hundreds well a lot of pelicans. The fish were jumping, the Sea Lions were jumping out of the water and diving in after the fish in long rows and then they would just circle up and rest as they wait for another school of fish (I guess) to come bye then off they went. I've never seen anything like it. Diana Martel who took care of my dog and cottage while I was gone came back to go swimming in the ocean cause it was so beautiful and she actually caught a 6" sardine and had it in her swimming cap. There were people out on kayaks with buckets just pulling in the fish. I've never ever seen a thing like it!

I was running down the beach to see them and it was a beautiful, clear, low tide day, right after tax time. it's great to be back. It's beautiful here! Everything is blooming. Spring is finally here. Pelicans and harbor seals hauled out yesterday.
