DANCE PALACE, 5TH & B STREETS, POINT REYES STATION

Guest scientists Ken Buesseler & Tim Mousseau

in conversation with Mary Beth Brangan, EON Co-director.

Sponsors: Point Reyes Books, Ecological Options Network, Fukushima Response

Organizer: Bing Gong

300 tons of radioactively contaminated water continue to pour daily into the Pacific from the triple meltdown at Fukushima. Formerly rich farms around the plant remain uninhabitable. What levels of oceanic contamination are detectible so far? Has it reached the West Coast? What are the effects on wild life in the contaminated areas?

Learn from two eminent scientists about their important efforts to track and document the on-going impacts of the nuclear disaster in Japan.

Ken Buesseler, Marine Biologist, Center for Marine and Environmental Radioactivity

Within months of the Fukushima disaster, Ken Buesseler assembled an international research cruise to sample the waters surrounding the nuclear plant. To date, important fisheries remain closed due to cesium levels above Japanese limits for seafood. Ocean currents are bringing the radioactive particles released from Fukushima to the West Coast. Buesseler now monitors over 50 sites along the West Coast, from Alaska to Mexico, with citizen-scientist funding and participation. Radioactive cesium from Fukushima was detected in ocean water samples in August 2014 off the coast of northern California and in April 2015, in Ucluelet B.C.

Tim Mousseau, Research Biologist, University of South Carolina, Columbia.

Professor Mousseau has studied the impacts of radioactive contaminants on biological communities in the Chernobyl region of Ukraine and Fukushima Prefecture, Japan. His research suggests that many species of birds, plants and animals have experienced direct toxicity from the Chernobyl and Fukushima disasters. This mutational load has had dramatic consequences for development, reproduction and survival, and the effects observed at individual and population levels are having significant impacts on these regions.

Free, but donations gratefully received

From VI©KISA:

I am happy to be represented by my latest box in
Gallery Route One's 17th Annual BOX SHOW™

The show Is Closing Sunday, September 13, with a Party from 2-3 PM and Live Auction at 3 PM.

Open everyday during The Box Show™ from 11 AM to 5 PM
11101 Highway One, Point
Reyes Station, CA 94956
415.663.1347

Honestly this year's boxes are truly amazing and the bidding has been spirited.
Some folks say it is the best ever.

The fun Closing Party and Live Auction with competitive bidding out loud is very fun to watch or participate in. Last year there were some tense moments between bidders who stopped at nothing to get the box of their dreams. I cannot tell you that it isn't a crush but it is a fun crush. GRO is open 11-5 everyday during the BOX SHOW.

You can feel really good cause it is the biggest fundraiser. All proceeds from the sale of the boxes fund G R O's outreach programs: The Artists in the Schools Program, the Latino Photography Project, and Gallery Route One's Young Artists Fellowship, operating expenses and more.

preview of my box FYI it is better in person

Keep Conserving Water

The article below is from this month's edition of the Association of California Water Agencies newsletter. Clearly, long-range weather prediction is still a sketchy science.

Don Smith, BCPUD Board

El Niño No Drought Buster

Amid increasing reports that a strong El Niño is likely to hit California this winter, Michael Anderson, California's state climatologist, issued a statement Aug. 13 cautioning that El Niño is far from certain this winter, and even if it does arrive, it likely will not bring enough needed snow and water to Northern California.

"California cannot count on potential El Niño conditions to halt or reverse drought conditions," Anderson said in a prepared statement. "Historical weather data shows us that at best, there is a 50/50 chance of having a wetter winter. Unfortunately, due to shifting climate patterns, we cannot even be that sure."

According to the statement from Anderson, past years with similar forecasts of El Niño conditions provide little guidance as to what California might expect this winter. Of the seven years since 1950 with similar El Niño signals — the 1958, 1966, 1973, 1983, 1988, 1992, and 1998 — three were wet years, one was average and three were dry.
