MAGIC BEANS

Last fall Mark Butler gave my gal Vanessa a handful of magic beans, an ancient heirloom "Sacred Fava" varietal from South America, with the stipulation that she plant them first for seed saving. Mark started out a few years ago with just 8 beans, given to him by Doug Gosling of the Occidental Arts & Ecology Center. Van planted her sacred fava beans at the West Marin school garden and had her gardening class kids up there tend and harvest them. When we finally got around to shelling our crop last week, I was so enthralled by the wild whorled patterns on each bean that I decided to throw a handful on the photocopier at the Hearsay. To me they look like magic ears, listening to the heartbeat of the Universe.

If you are interested in growing some yourself, contact me, Jeff Manson, at 805-844-8658. Just remember the one rule, to first grow, save and share these special seeds.

Prescient? Or Paranoid?

From John Grissim's West Marin Journal, 1984.

One senses a mood shift in Bo Bo, or at least the anticipation of change. For example, after the great oil spill of 1971 when an influx of bright newcomers settled in and linked ideologies with the resident poets, there followed fermentation and tumult. The California vision of Ecotopia may have been born here. That elegant volume, The Town That Fought To Save Itself (by Orville Schell and Ilka Hartmann) was one of several gems that resulted.

However, after the tenth set of Bolinas highway signs disappeared, I remember thinking the book might well have been titled, The Town That Dared Not Call Its Name. Yet, in the last decade, it seems that many of the movers and shakers have moved on, while their places have not been taken by others with a similar zeal, expertise and vision. Granted, the platform stance remains intact and the Border Patrol is still a media presence, but most of the generals have retired or moved on. A sign of the times?

Howsoever one may interpret these developments, it seems that Bo Bo these days is a little less angry. To be sure, for every redneck elsewhere in these parts, there may be a corresponding Bo Bo astral fascist to keep the faith with occasional public outbursts of livid righteousness (though no names come to mind at this writing). Could it be that the inexorable forces of rising property values and the Bed & Breakfast boutiqueing of West Marin now lay claim to the future? If so, the impact of such a trend bears close scrutiny.

The town of Bolinas (as distinct from Downtown Bo Bo) would certainly merit examination in this event. To that end I have made application to the Consulate for a visa. Gee, I don't know what all the fuss is about. Paul Kayfetz has graciously assured me that as soon as I tell him the desired date of my visit, he will make all necessary arrangements for my passport. Stay tuned.

Bolinas Museum's New Executive Director

After years of outstanding service as Executive Director, Vandy Seeburg (Lucy Van Sands Seeburg) is retiring. Finding her replacement has been a thorough and heartfelt process by the Bolinas Museum Board of Directors who appointed a committee to conduct the search. Committee members volunteered countless hours to evaluate over 35 applicants. The position of Executive Director requires multi-tasking and juggling complex administrative duties, detailed aesthetic decisions, producing announcements and brochures, maintaining the Museum facilities, budget management, attending various meetings and countless details for current and upcoming events, social relationships, fundraising, and setting up chairs. Vandy has managed all that and more with gracious efficiency while emphasizing teamwork with the staff, Board of Directors, Museum volunteers and supporters.

Mindful of these demands, the Search Committee's process became especially challenging after they reduced the list of impressive potential applicants to a few whose experience and interests met all the job requirements. Respecting each person's privacy, the process was not made public, though our communities were rife with speculation. It was up to each candidate to convincingly present their experience and qualifications along with their vision for the Museum. Each individual had strengths and drawbacks, so the committee gave each thorough and unbiased consideration using a criteria matrix. The day before the final candidates were scheduled for a full day of interviews with Board Members and Museum staff, each candidate was asked to write a project proposal for the Museum.

The Board of Directors is pleased to announce the new Executive Director, is Jennifer Gately, an energetic, experienced and passionate woman, who has a deep love for Coastal Marin. Jennifer brings nearly 20 years of experience from the world of art including Director of Visual Arts at Sun Valley Center for the Arts, and first curator of Northwest Art at Portland Art Museum. Most recently Jennifer served as Executive Director at the San Francisco Art Dealers Association and as a consultant with Futures Without Violence where her work sparked the development of a ground breaking interactive science exhibition that shows violence is not an inherent part of the human condition. Originally from New England, Jennifer has lived in Oregon and Idaho, but found Northern California to be home. An avid naturalist and surfer, she was moving to Bolinas when she heard about this job. The project proposal she presented was a polished, professional and detailed concept for a multi-disciplinary exhibition on Biomimicry (seeking sustainable solutions by emulating nature's time-tested patterns and strategies). The Board of Directors feels confident that Jennifer will bring lively and innovative ideas, shared by our members and visitors, to fruition. She will begin the position, training with Vandy, in September 2012.

Vandy Seeburg was hired as Executive Director in 2006 to replace retiring Director Dolores Richards. The other finalist, Deborah White, joined the Board and provided years of invaluable support, as did her husband Gordon White who assisted in the Strategic Plan process. During Vandy's tenure the Museum has flourished.

Toward the end of the interview process Vandy and Jennifer met and Vandy, who has invested so much energy into the Museum, feels confident in turning over the reins to Jennifer Gately. We know our communities, Museum members and visitors will warmly welcome Jennifer, support her, and help her to guide the Bolinas Museum into a bright future.

The online Hearsay News is about to change

Starting Wednesday, August 1, 2012, much of the Hearsay website will have no password. That's right... No password. The HOME PAGE, LOCAL WEBSITES (including the historically interesting TERRACE REPAIR), ADVERTISING RATES, and ANCIENT ARCHIVES (including BEFORE HEARSAY), will be available without password to non-subscribers. Just point your favorite web browser to www.hearsaynews.org, and, bingo! – there you are.

Also starting August 1, 2012, TODAY'S PAPER and CURRENT ARCHIVES (going back a year), will be password-protected and available to subscribers only. Subscriptions are available on a sliding scale. The baseline suggestion is a dollar a week, more or less ... somewhere around fifty dollars a year. Email me at hearsaynews@yahoo.com if you want to try it, send payment to Hearsay News, P.O. Box 327, Bolinas, CA 94924. Or stop by the City Desk at the BCPUD, 240 Elm Road any Monday, Wednesday, or Friday morning. Regular advertisers, editors, staff, and poor people are encouraged to take full or partial scholarship subscriptions. I will remind you when your year's subscription is about to lapse so you can renew.

One other change – you will be able to read TODAY'S PAPER without downloading it. It will just appear there, each page in order, posted as a jpeg, quick and easy to read, still not searchable. Don't worry, a PDF version will also be posted if you prefer to download it. The CURRENT ARCHIVES will continue to be posted as PDF's only.

If, when you lay your head upon your pillow tonight, you could choose to slip into a dream dimension where time would literally expand, so much so that you could live out an entire other lifetime within it as a person "designed" by you from head to toe, even choosing your name and who your parents would be. Where every single day you'd be pushed on to greatness, every single challenge would motivate you to become more, and all of your dreams could come true. Where, no matter how things may ever seem, you'd be bathed in love, surrounded by friends, safe and sound in your very own bed. And, where upon waking all that you loved and learned in the lifetime would remain with you and all that scared and threatened you would only have prepared you for even more love and learning in the near future...

Would you choose to go there, just for one night, on the condition that during the dream itself you mustn't have any recollection of how you got there, its purpose, or what might happen next?

Of course you would, you're a super-cool-happy Love-Thing!

Which begs the question, "How do you know, then, that this isn't that dream?"
