Founder, Alternate Friday Editor, Temporary Hawaii Bureau Chief, and Current Online Editor of the Bolinas Hearsay News, Michael Rafferty, pictured on his recent introductory visit to the Big Island, showing off the gift he was given by the Volcano Goddess Pele. Other highlights included a quarter-mile walking tour inside an empty lava tube, a sunny visit to the Painted Church, filming Amy, Maria, and Mark zip-lining back and forth across a rain-forest ravine, body-surfing at the nearly-inaccessible Green Sand Beach with turtles, seeing whales breach and blow and wave their tails in the air, touring a coffee plantation, eating a single slice of incredible Macadamia Nut Custard Pie at the Southernmost Bakery in the United States, walking over miles of barren lava fields to ponder the primitive Hawaiian Petroglyphs while experiencing a 5.0 earthquake atop ground zero, and reaching with a single eye from near the summit of Mauna Kea into the clear depths of outer space on a brilliant moonless night overwhelmed by billions and billions and billions of stars so close you felt you could touch them. Glad to be home.

READING TO JOHN

On Tues. 1/31 at 10 am on KWMR (89.9) I'll read "Batard" by Jack London. A match made in hell: mean Leclere and this part wolf. Yes, lots of brutality (nature raw in tooth and claw), but also great descriptions of the terrain, wicked humor, and a rip-roaring ending to boot. I'll finish up with reviews.
