READING TO JOHN

On Tues. Jan. 9 at 10 am on KWMR (89.9) I'll read two short stories by Molly Giles. A mother and her two grown kids on vacation in Mexico, not happy campers by a long shot. And a guy in Woodacre who's grappling with his own mortality. Yes, death makes its presence felt in both, but that provides the chiaroscuro of life, I believe. I'll end with reviews.

Dear Bolinas,

As you may or may not know my sweet beloved man, Robert, is home confined to bed under hospice and has been for over a year. I currently have a band of awesome respite volunteers that come to my home from 3-4 hours M-F so I may continue my work at the BCC. My beloved band of volunteers just suffered the loss of Steve Wrenn and is about to lose 2 to a few month leave of absence. My Friday volunteer is not available a lot of Jan/Feb so I am looking for more volunteers. Robert is a wonderful man and the visit usually entails getting food, watching a movie or just sitting quiet if he should sleep.

There is no "hands on" nursing stuff just making sure he has what he needs. It is very easy, I know I do it 21/7. So let me know if you are interested or want to talk with one of the team that are already in place.

Thank you in advance.

Love, love, love

There Is No Alas Where I Live

December 14, 2017 – January 27, 2018

There Is No Alas Where I Live, 2017, mixed media, 22 x 30 inches

Life can be so magnificent and challenging simultaneously. Photographs are documents of this dichotomy and photographers are witnesses, participant-observers, and those who present truths. Beauty and truth. The title, There is No Alas Where I Live, taken from a Theodore Roethke poem, signifies that there may be grief and concern in this life, but there is no pity and there is no regret.
