HAPPY HOLIDAYS TO YOU!

So it looks like I missed the boat once again in getting a quaint family photo taken that I can make a holiday card out of it and send it off to all my friends and family. I wasn't even able to make it to Longs to pick up one of those boxed card sets with a frosted graphic of Santa or the Baby Jesus or something. I guess I am a product of my own imagination (or lack thereof). I'm so set on creating some kind of witty, clever holiday card that I don't even get anything out as I just can't get it together. For example, I considered writing one of those lengthy family missives, printed on pretty, blue snowflake stationary, that talks about how great the boys are doing and all the awards and accolades that our family has received over the past year. But really, our family is doing the same thing as everyone else; working, going to school, walking the dog, worrying about money.... booooring. So, that was out. Then, as I noted above, I pondered the idea of taking a silly family photo with the kids fighting, the dog barking, the parents drinking... but that's just too close to reality. So, I just decided that I would kill a lot of birds with one stone (no birds were actually harmed during the making of this letter, although it is written on paper, which means a tree was probably cut down...) and send all my friends, who read the Hearsay anyway, a public wish for a VERY MERRY HOLIDAY! Happy, happy, happy Chanukah, Festivus, Kwanzaa, Christmas, or whatever Random Non-Denominational Holiday that you celebrate. I am very grateful to be a part of this crazy, silly community and I hope that everyone in it has a most fabulous New Year (yes, even that person I don't really like all that much, but don't really know so cant really say that I don't really like). Thanks for being such great friends and for being such a fantastic community!! (next year I may just send a card).

XOXO

Warren Hellman, financier and philanthropist, dies at 77

David R. Baker, Chronicle Staff Writer

Monday, December 19, 2011

Warren Hellman, the San Francisco financier whose willingness to fund an unlikely range of passions made him a force in Bay Area politics, education and music, died Sunday evening from complications of leukemia, his family said. He was 77.

Public services are planned for Wednesday at Congregation Emanu-El in San Francisco and will be followed within a few weeks by a community celebration of Mr. Hellman's life, his family said.

Mr. Hellman built a fortune as an investor and seemed determined to spend much of it. Co-founder of the Hellman & Friedman private-equity firm, he poured money into local causes, some political, some personal.

He bankrolled San Francisco ballot measures that reformed the city's pension system and created an underground parking garage beneath Golden Gate Park. He funded the San Francisco Free Clinic and helped set up an endowment to support aquatic sports at UC Berkeley, where he played water polo as a student. Concerned about dwindling local news coverage in the Internet age, he helped form the Bay Citizen online journalism site.

And in 2001, Mr. Hellman sponsored a free, outdoor concert devoted to bluegrass music, a love he had nurtured for years.

Since then, the Hardly Strictly Bluegrass festival has grown into an annual three-day event drawing more than 300,000 people to Golden Gate Park. It is still free, with costs covered by an endowment that Hellman - an amateur banjo player - created to ensure that the festival would continue "after I croak," he said.

His daughter Patricia Hellman Gibbs confirmed Sunday that "yes, the Hardly Strictly Bluegrass festival will go on!"

"He was truly a Renaissance man, excelling in so many aspects of life," she said. "He was a phenomenally successful businessman, a lifelong competitive athlete, a community leader, a dedicated musician, and fiercely devoted to his family. He and Mom were the yin and yang that made our family whole, complementary to each other in so many ways."

Mr. Hellman seemed to enjoy talking about his philanthropy more than his business deals, and often said that collecting expensive cars or art didn't interest him.

"What does move me is the philanthropic stuff," he told Forbes magazine in 2006. "Giving really does move me. Part of it is selfish. It's fun to be appreciated. But the other part is that good things really are growing."

He called the bluegrass festival a "selfish gift," one that he, the musicians and the community could all enjoy.

"How could you have more fun than that?" he told Forbes. "What the hell is money for if it isn't for something like that?"

Part of Golden Gate Park will bear his name as a result. The San Francisco Recreation and Park Commission recently agreed to rename Speedway Meadow, the center of the festival, as Hellman Hollow.

Mr. Hellman learned of the name change last week, said his son, Mick Hellman. "It meant a ton to him," he said. "He was incredibly gratified."

'Utmost effort'

Although he was born in New York City, Mr. Hellman's personality displayed a distinctly Californian combination: laid-back in some respects, relentless in others.

He competed in extreme sports and at one point finished a 100-mile race in the Sierra after falling and breaking a rib at mile 25. Known for a casual wardrobe frayed with use, his financial acumen helped build Hellman & Friedman into a powerhouse of the buyout business.

The company made its name taking jeans maker Levi Strauss & Co. private in 1985, a $1.6 billion transaction that at the time was the largest-ever buyout of a publicly held U.S. firm. In 2001, Hellman & Friedman purchased a 15 percent ownership stake in the Nasdaq stock market, expanding the stake in 2005 and selling it for considerable profit in 2007.

"Warren is very strong-willed," Mr. Hellman's wife of 56 years, Chris, told The Chronicle in 2001. "He doesn't like not doing well at something, so he just absolutely puts the utmost effort into everything."

Only Informed Speculation

Physicist Tom Nash, PhD

Tom Nash is now an emeritus scientist at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, where he spent more than 30 years as an experimental high-energy and astro physicist.

His conversation with Michael Lerner will cover :

The conceptually difficult "Standard Model" and the much in the news search for its final undiscovered prediction, the Higgs Boson (aka the "God" particle)

Stephen Hawking's beautiful book, The Grand Design, about the structure of the universe and the suggestions that there is a multi-universe, of which ours, The Universe, is just one of a huge number.

The technically heroic search, in which Tom is participating, for gravitational waves, perhaps including some from The Beginning.

FROM THE NEW EVERY OTHER FRIDAY EDITOR:

So! We're switching things around a little here at the Hearsay The powers that be have decided to let me have a crack at editing our fine paper & this is my first attempt. But but don't be alarmed! Stuart's still on board, doing every other Wed. trading off with Steve. Jennie and Ned will keep on with their Mondays and Michael & I will trade off on Fridays.

So we are! I'd love for my Hearsay to be full of as many different opinions, perspectives and new ideas as possible so feel free to submit strange drawings, outlandish manifestos, exciting news, poems recipes etc. up to the BCPUD or track me down at the co-op and remember:

Everyone is a reporter! Just remember to sign your name!

Lunch at the Community Center

Sunday, December 25

Gather around 11:30, eat around 1 pm

We are planning on having many kinds of food and plenty of it. Please come to celebrate any thing you like and contribute what you can.

With the winter Solstice passed, the light will be returning.

While some of our loved ones have passed, there are many still here.

I will celebrate the Bolinas Community I have known And loved for years. No one should have to be alone Or hungry. So ... Come on down.

And, if you desire to help we will need some strong Folks to set up the tables, decorate if you like, wood For the fireplace and one or two to make a good Fire. Flowers and CDs are also welcome.

We cannot have alcohol in the Hall because since this was sort of last minute, we didn't get permits.

"The West Marin Transportation Plan Committee, through its members, has committed to provide some form of scheduled service between Bolinas and Olema if and when the West Marin Stage service is eliminated. It has begun to develop a car share and a van share program for use by community members. It is committed to finding transportation solutions that more adequately serve our communities elderly, Latino and ranch population, and youth programs. It is already operating the Over the Hill Gang, a very successful ride share program sponsored by the West Marin Commons.

From Vickisa:

This is not a holiday message. I am just back from LA where the weather was crappy. Merlin is doing contracting like his Dad but building a house almost from scratch right on the beach in Malibu. One of the favorite places of the stars. Scary to me . the ocean comes up against it. I went to the LACMA and saw Art Espenet (Carpenters) chair in the California Dreaming. That was great he was at home there in that show.

I was picking up my dog from doggie Camp when I got the call that Warren Hellman died. I did not know him well but I was very fond of Warren. He gave me the gift of HSBG and every year I made a fold out book about the festival and gave him a book. He was very gracious about it and kept them in his collection. I always put him in though every year I said I would not and put in new people but every year he did something amazing which made me include him. One time he wore a bedazzled jacket after I had only seen him in khaki, green and denim. I said Warren what happened He looked me in then eye touched my shoulder and said " Burning man Vickisa" Then another year he wore an amazing blue jacket that his daughter enhanced with giant glittery Jewish stars and writing. It really made me think. He wore it again when he played with his grandson Sam so I included him this year for the very last time because it made me think about how devoted he was to his family and how much the music brought families together like Pamela Brandon family that came from England every year. I had Warren on my radio show years ago and that is how I got to know him. We bonded I think though at the funeral I saw how many just amazing people he knew. I found his family to be remarkable and when the 12 grandchildren sang the Big Rock Candy mountain it was truly a mitsvah that the music still went on in them. The rabbi was an amazing person having skied with the Hellmans and been a part of his life in a very meaningful way. If I had a rabbi like that... Anyway a tear game to my eye when I arrived and saw the 4 mounted police cause Warren and I both loved them and I got to know them from including them in my book. I cannot believe I do not get to give it to him this year. Warren packed more in a life time then anyone I know and the people that told about it at the funeral were gifted and gave a gift. They did it with brilliance and humor which ranked high with Warren. Everyone got in and everyone there was meant to be there. You will recognize some of the 30 banjo pickers or should I say plunkers. Warren would have just loved it.

I want to thank Rosie and Julio for all of their kindness with my cousin David Franklin and our family and say what a jewel Sams House is. How cool that they had Warren play there.
