Dear Hearsay,

Our Supervisor, Dennis Rodoni, assured me that the new County Ordinance regarding living in RVs on a street was drafted for issues in San Rafael, and that "nothing will happen in Bolinas without a community discussion and support."

Just One More Word

Jan 30 2017

I've spoken with a lot of folks over the weekend, and most seem to agree that the essence of our two opposing viewpoints would be most clearly defined as:

- 1. Those who are not in favor of any signage and ordinances.
- 2. Those who are.

Since the establishment of our town's plan in the 70's it has been our ethos to be self-governing.

That we've remained over all these decades almost completely free of serious crime, attests to the effectiveness of that plan.

FOUR GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE...

- First camillias! First daffodils!
- Our block is now officially broom-free. It may be the only one in town. Between Tulip and Walnut—no scotch broom. I'm very proud.
- Skunk love. It's in the air. Watch out for the little creatures on the road.
- Imbolc. The pagans and Celts celebrate the halfway point between the equinox and the solstice as the first day of spring. Light a candle February 2nd for the return of the light.

LECTURE SERIES 2017

Hungry For Answers: Why Do We Waste So Much Food?

Saturday, February 4 | 9:00 am - Noon

The Bay Model, 2100 Bridgeway, Sausalito, CA

Food. Essential for life, it sustains us as it propels economies. Defines cultures. Fuels industries. But even as our sophistication at food production increases, we seem unable—or perhaps just disinclined—to recognize and attempt to solve the enormous and perpetual problems surrounding food.

We grow and produce higher quantities of food today than ever before, yet billions face hunger on a daily basis. We consume enormous amounts of precious water and fuel in the process, emitting prodigious amounts of greenhouse gases along the way, while over 30% of our food supply is wasted—left in the fields, spoiled in transit, uneaten at the table.

Our speakers will clarify the facts around food production and waste, and help us to gain an understanding of how we can address and resolve the issues.

Speakers

- Jordan Figueiredo—Anti-Food Waste Activist
- Nick Lapis—Director of Advocacy, Californians Against Waste
- Kathy Carver—Operations Manager, ExtraFood.org
- Jacquie Phelan—Food Recovery Activist
- Julie Owen Hanft—Founder, Marin Open Garden Project and Marin GreenPlay

She Decides – How Holland is Saving Family Planning

On his first Monday in office, President Trump reinstated the 'Mexico City policy' that blocks US federal funds for non-governmental organizations that provide abortion counseling or referrals, advocate to decriminalize abortion or expand abortion services. This policy was implemented in 1984 by Ronald Reagan at a UN population conference in Mexico City. Hence the name – the Mexico City policy. It was repealed by Bill Clinton, reinstated by George W. Bush, and repealed by Obama. (You may remember that Trump was prochoice until it was politically valuable to be for compulsory pregnancy. Reagan signed the bill allowing therapeutic abortion in California.)

Trump did more than just reinstate the policy, he expanded it to apply to all global health funding, not just to family planning. Organizations helping with HIV prevention and treatment, immunization, maternal health care, Zika virus prevention et al. will also be affected. According to Population Action International, a global family planning advocacy organization, the gag rule will apply to $9.5 billion in global health funding, as opposed to $575 million in family planning funding.

Organizations that provide family planning and safe abortion care, such as the International Planned Parenthood Federation and Marie Stopes International, will not sign on to the gag rule's conditions. They point out that the new rule will not reduce abortions, but increase the number of illegal ones, as happened in sub-Saharan Africa during George W. Bush's time in office.

Holland has come to the rescue. Lillianne Ploumen, Holland's minister for foreign trade and development cooperation, has announced that it is putting 10 million euros ($10.7 million) into an international fund it launched to finance access to birth control, abortion and sex education for women in developing nations after President Donald Trump cut U.S. funding for such services. Ploumen has launched a fund "She Decides - Global Fundraising Initiative" — with a website. Ploumen says she has received thousands of reactions — the vast majority of them positive — after announcing the fund Tuesday. Canada has also pledged to sign on to the funding. In a few days, individuals from all over the world will be able to pledge support through the website— "She Decides – Global Fundraising Initiative. I will keep you posted on this website. Donations will be coordinated by The Rutgers Foundation, and international NGO working on sexual and reproductive rights based in the Netherlands.

Minister Ploumen said the withdrawal of U.S. money will create a huge funding gap that can only be filled through a robust reaction by governments, aid organizations and private donors. The fund will "prevent women and girls being abandoned," she added. "Because they, too, must be able to decide for themselves if they want children, with whom and when." Ploumen said much more money is needed but "I'm confident we can go a long way so that essential services, not just for women, but for the whole of society, can be maintained."

At the Women's March in San Francisco, and from reports of similar marches in Washington and throughout the world, there were many striking and meaningful posters and signs. I am struck by the power of the two words Lillianne Ploumen selected for her new website and the generous action of the Netherlands – 'She Decides'.

The website will be open for individual donations later this week. In the meantime, if you are burning with indignation at Trump's actions against women's health or immigration policy, you

WHAT HAPPENED THIS WEEK
1/30/17 MONDAY MORNING RECAP
Week in Review from Jennie Pfeiffer

It's been a week when we got some very real answers to the rhetorical question "how bad could it be?" in response to the Donald being inaugurated as President.

Here is what happened this week, actions he's already taken in the first 7 days that dismantle the progress of the last eight years:

- Began rolling back the Affordable Care Act
- Instituted a ban on Muslims from entering the U.S.
- Moved forward with building a border wall at the expense of American taxpayers
- Cut funding to "sanctuary cities" and restricted refugees from entering the U.S.
- Restricted women's ability to make healthcare decisions around the globe
- Repeated his favorite lie that "3-5 million illegal votes" were cast, that he had the largest inaugural turnout ever, and that the rain stopped and the sun started shining when he started speaking
- Cleared roadblocks for a pipeline that threatens the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe's sacred land and water supply and moved forward with the Keystone XL pipeline
- Started wiping out scientific data from the EPA website and is prohibiting any governmental agencies from providing any scientific information related to global warming, basically gagging scientists all over the country. (makes me gag a little myself.)

And there are probably more we don't even know about yet.

So yes, it can be pretty devastatingly bad, and the Trump supporters still aren't happy. The comments posted on Facebook are still so viciously, venomously angry and hatefully hostile -- and their guy won. Hard to imagine how things would be if he lost.

I have been so proud this week to live in a state with a governor and elected officials speaking up for rational thinking, and Senators and Legislators standing firm for basic human rights and the rule of law.

It was so moving to see the outpouring of demonstrators at airports around the country, standing firmly against the demagoguery of holding travelers in detention with no cause other than a Trump tantrum and the whimsy of another Presidential order.

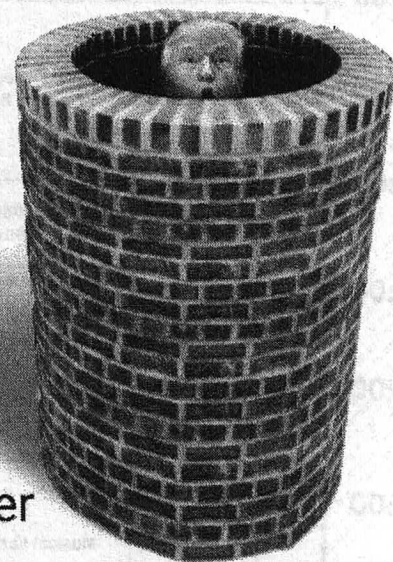

And I'm proud to see so many others still standing with Standing Rock supporters.

I love living in a community where people continue to make art (some excellent exhibits now in the museum and around town) and music (thanks Amber Hines for the family fun dancing that will be ongoing the last Sunday of every month, giving those of us who missed it another chance), and where we come together to roast pig and potatoes in the park, and basically support each other in a kind way.

Sorry to report that Mindful Parenting was cancelled Tuesday evening -- actually Mindful Parenting is ongoing, I'm glad to report. What got cancelled was the presentation by the District for parents. Unfortunately, the presenter was ill. The event is rescheduled for February 28th.

I'm closing with this cartoon that was posted on the internet. Unfortunately, I don't know to whom credit is due, so let me know if you have that information and I will be able to acknowledge. POR jp
