THE RISE AND SHINE SHOW

Mary Siedman will interview singer/songwriter Michelle Schmitt on The Rise and Shine Show this Tuesday morning between 8 and 9 a.m. on KWMR, 89.9 - Bolinas, Schmitt, born in Detroit, started playing guitar and writing songs when she was 12 years old. She moved to San Francisco in 1977. Gifted with a soulful voice, the ability to express her feelings through her heartfelt songwriting and a talented band, Michelle delivers songs that stand the test of time. A modern 70's vibe best describes her sound... beautiful harmonies, soothing and intelligent melodies.

Michelle Schmitt's new CD has been released and she will be in concert at the Throckmorton in Mill Valley on Thursday, December 13 at 8 p.m. Michelle is a Marin local, and a big supporter of Meals On Wheels of San Francisco, the organization receiving the proceeds from the concert on the 13th.

ALL CHARGES HAVE BEEN DROPPED AGAINST JAKE GLAVIS

I would like to inform all friends of Jake Glavis and our extended family that all charges have been dropped concerning pending litigation against Jake.

As you can imagine, this comes as a tremendous relief for him, his family, and all who consider him dear. I realize this is a deeply personal and private situation - but I feel it safe to say that our Community is as personally vital to our lives as immediate family. I want to thank each of you who continued to support him in your hearts and with your prayers during this difficult time. I know you know that this case was without merit and completely fabricated.

I would also ask prayers and compassion for his accuser who must now face the terrible reality and aftermath of creating such suffering and ill will. I cannot imagine the horrible pain that motivated such self-destructive behavior and the lonely journey ahead for this individual...

Thank-you again for all the support given to my family. Gratitude to the divine guidance that brought us all here together in this sacred place we call HOME.....

John Glavis

THREE GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE...

- (1) Seeing families reassemble for the holidays—especially in our case, having the grandson back from Spain.
- (2) Holiday parties—specifically last Friday's Xmas bash in Amazing Grace Music's new space.
- (3) Barb Rothwell. She leaves a big empty space in the town and in our hearts.

Tales From Over the Hill

I'd been thinking about Buddy Craig, and I thought it would be fun to play some of his music at the Winter Faire, and I asked Emmeline if she had any of his stuff.

"You're in luck." she answered. "I just got Buddy's new CD."

"It's been five years since his death. It took me five years to put it together, but here it is." and she handed me "Tales From Over the Hill" by Buddy Craig.

"The back of the CD looks like an old vinyl record." Emmeline explained. "Like Buddy wanted."

Memories of Buddy flooded my consciousness as I read the liner notes "recorded at the Gibson House."

The CD is a collection of 12 of Buddy's songs. Buddy's voice and guitar playing always seemed to me to be more Bakersfield than Bolinas, and the songs on the CD have that distinctive California C&W (Country and Western) sound.

The emotional tone of Buddy's songs, like much of country & western, ranges from sweet sad to really sad. It's a powerfully poignant portrait of Buddy as an artist engaged in an epic struggle with his own damn self

... like all of us.

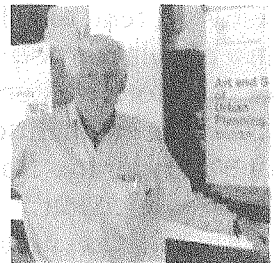

-StuArt

"Tales From Over the Hill" by Buddy Craig is available from Emmeline at her studio.

MOSTLY MEETINGS & MISCELLANY Monday Morning Recap & Week in Review from Jenniepfeiffer is on break until the end of December yearend update. Do want to say, however, how much I am missing my good friend Barb Rothwell. Such an enthusiastic and hard working Bolinas community member, such a great mother to John Rene, and such a dedicated daughter and caregiver to her mother, Mary. Such a tragedy to lose her and have her young life ended in such a devastating way. Heartfelt condolences to her family.

Chinese Cities: Their Amazing Rise and Possible Futures

Please RSVP for this event using our online registration system.

Since China's "reform and opening up" beginning in the late 1970s, China has had double-digit gross domestic product (GDP) growth almost every year, including close to a 50% increase in GDP since the global economic crisis began in 2007. In addition to its role as the world's manufacturing center, China is metamorphosing itself into a global financial center, and, increasingly, a center of innovation. Join us for this discussion of China's urbanization and China's urban future.

Richard LeGates is a professor emeritus of Urban Studies and Planning at San Francisco State University and an authority on urbanization and city and regional planning.

Go to Health: Snuggle or Struggle?

Writing in the July 2012 issue of Scientific American, Martin Novak outlined the ways in which cooperation has operated to shape evolution. Novak is a professor of biology and mathematics at Harvard; he has looked at evolution in species from amoebas to zebras, and has found that cooperation, and selfless behavior, is a pervasive phenomenon. The view that competition, for resources, mates, prestige, and leadership has been the most important factor explaining survival is challenged by this view.

Novak looked at numerous species to illustrate his views, and identified 5 mechanisms for the evolution of cooperation.

1. Vampire bats will share their blood meal with one who lost out on a given day; bats remember who helped them and later return the favor. Novak calls this direct reciprocity.

2. Neighbors, or friends in a social network, tend to help one another, so in a population with groups of cooperators, clusters develop that can prevail in competition with those who don't cooperate. Novak calls this 'spacial selection'.

3. Kin selection occurs when individuals make sacrifices for their relatives, who share their genes, still fostering the spread of these genes.

J.B.S. Haldane, who first mentioned kin selection, wrote "I will jump in the river to save 2 brothers, or 8 cousins."

4. Individuals may help another member of his (her) species based on the needy individual's reputation. When the helper is in need, s/he may become the beneficiary of more help, having been seen to be generous.

Novak calls this 'indirect reciprocity', and feels it is especially important in humans.

5. Finally individuals may perform selfless acts for the greater good of the group, as opposed to a single member. This is known as 'group selection'.

Lionesses within a pride will suckle each other's young. Ants work together and sacrifice themselves to serve their colony. In his book The Descent of Man Darwin wrote that "a tribe including many members who....were always ready to aid one another, and to sacrifice themselves for the common good, would be victorious over most other tribes, and this would be natural selection".

Novak writes that cooperation has been a driving force in the evolution of life from the beginning, and that it has been particularly useful for humans because of our language. We can share information about each other - from our family members to strangers anywhere on earth. We are intensely interested in who does what to whom, and why. Reputation plays a major role in our decisions of how to position ourselves in the social network around us, what to do, what to support, what to buy.

Researchers looking at the need for cooperation to reduce climate change have found that people are more altruistic when they receive authoritative information about climate research, and they act more generously when allowed to make their contributions publicly rather than anonymously - when their reputation is on the line. When people receive a gas bill that compares their own consumption with the average household gas consumption in their neighborhood and that of the most efficient homes, they lower their consumption. How's that for the interplay of competition and cooperation?

Our political parties both embrace concepts of individual struggle and cooperative unity, with Republicans leaning more toward individualism and competition, and Democrats more toward mutual help and cooperation. The balance is constantly shifting. Here in Bolinas, it seems that cooperation has been on the upswing for years. I am stunned by the work that people do locally for public good. We have the food programs at the Community Center, and at Mesa Park, Food for Families, the new Saturday lunch at St. Aidan's Church, the free showers at Sam's House, the free book store, and the immense amount of volunteer work to put on programs at the Community Center. Volunteer work for other local non-profits is outstanding - everyone I know is involved in one or another. Recently we have avoided the turmoil that has been so difficult in Point Reyes, concerning the two weekly papers and the oyster company. I am sure new problems will arise as we evolve; hopefully we will use cooperative problem solving when they do. Novak sums up his article with the following: "My work indicates that instead of opposing competition, cooperation has operated alongside it from the get-go to shape the evolution of life on earth, from the first cells to Homo Sapiens. Life is therefore not just a struggle for survival, - it is also, one might say, a snuggle for survival."

THE HEARSAY NEWS 2013.1 DRAFT of the LOCAL ZONE PHONE DIRECTORY went on sale at the Winter Faire this past weekend. We sold over 90 copies, with 5 remaining. The 2013.2 run will go into production in January, incorporating the additions and corrections made at the WINTER FAIRE, and elsewhere around town.

It was very distressing to discover that the computer somehow dropped all the "H" names before Heffelfinger.

Big apologies for that, and no slight intended. We will be bringing you back into the fold ASAP There are many corrections to be made in this Draft Copy, so it will take some time to finalize, but we will work as quickly as possible This is the time to make additions, so if you want a business listing or display ad, or if you see errors, please email copy and corrections to hearsaynews@yahoo.com, or drop them at the Hearsay Office, (on Elm, behind the BCPUD water office), or downtown at Uniquities. If you bought a 2013.1 edition, you can trade it in for a 2013.2 copy, no extra charge. We will put out notices when the new Directory becomes available. jenniepeiffer for the Hearsay News Local Zone Phone Directory.
