Hike in garbage rates considered

County supervisors will decide at the beginning of next month whether to approve a garbage rate increase for most of West Marin as part of an agreement with a private waste management company seeking compensation for rising fuel prices. On January 8 the board will consider an increase of 3.25 percent, or $.83, in collection fees proposed by Redwood Empire Disposal for West Marin towns, excluding Bolinas and Stinson Beach. The proposal is part of a franchise agreement with the disposal company that is meant to read-just rates every three years based on fuel and maintenance costs and other expenses; the budget is subject to an audit every four years. The disposal company faces a nearly 8 percent increase in fuel costs, according to a press release by the Marin County Department of Public Works.

Directors and staff present: Randi Arnold - Development Director, Chris Besenty, Stacy Besenty, StuArt Chapman - President, Pam Dake, Serita Lewis, Jeff Manson, June McAdams - Secretary, Susie Mills, Lia Sabbatini - General Manager, Susie Stewart, Vanessa Waring, Steve Wrenn.

Visitors: Bill Barton - President Lion's Club, Kathleen O'Neill - Scribe

10:10 a.m. meeting called to order.

Minutes for the October meeting approved.
Agenda amended.

President's report: President is a bit under the weather, so we don't sing our Mission song.

Treasurer's report: We are doing rather well. Susan suggests that it's time to start working on the 2013 budget and a cash flow chart.

Manager's report: Halloween went really well and everyone enjoyed it and lots of people stopped in. We could have more food next year.

An informal discussion about employee vacation and the temporary replacements we have for maintenance positions going on vacation. A conversation about the community Center owning a pickup truck for Village and Beach clean-up if a good truck was donated. Also a discussion on possible income from donated vehicles, the owners receiving a tax deduction.

Don Smith has finished the first part of the sound project, the sound insulation over the stage. Positive results have come in. The Light person from San Francisco will come next week to look at the donated lights and advise us on what else we might need.

We have been advised that the Rex Foundation might be interested in helping with the next part of the sound improvement plan, the plug and play sound board.

Some planning was done for Thanksgiving Dinner as Ilka Hartman is unable to host this year's dinner, Randi & Lia have offered to take over this year.

Molly Maguire will be singing Christmas carols at the Tuesday Community Night on Dec. 18. The BCC will host a bar.

Winter Faire planning: Steve Wrenn reported on Santa's plans, K.O. will do a poster update, Barbary Coast will provide the food, Steve & Jeff will help with the ramp and StuArt will do a sign for the Y.

Planning is beginning for another kitchen benefit; a crab feed in the early part of January.

Development Director's report: Library Rental agreement is finalized and looks good. A box-holder mailing for the kitchen project is in progress and will replace the end of year major donor mailing.

Termites are two thirds done.

Other business: Jeff will be hosting a 2012 slide show and dinner on December 22. Everyone is welcome to submit slides at - bolinasslideshow@gmail.com.

Meeting adjourned at 12:00 pm

News briefs

Bolinas man apprehended for stolen road signs

A county road crew reinstalled numerous parking signs around Bolinas late last week that went missing in what authorities called a random act of theft. More than 20 no-parking signs, worth a total of about $1,000, were found stashed in the car of a Bolinas man who was stopped in August for an unrelated traffic violation. The suspect, Sean Keaveny, 32, has been charged with one count of receiving stolen property. He is scheduled to appear in court on January 7. Mr. Keaveny, known around town as "Sensitive Sean," is a singer and songwriter. Authorities, who held the signs for about four months as evidence, did not indicate a motive for the crime, but such roadside heists are not uncommon in Bolinas. Locals have for years developed a reputation for whisking away signs leading to town. "Out here in Bolinas," sheriff's deputy Rob McDaniels said, "people don't like signs." The thefts have not been limited to signs, though. Craig Parmley, a county road maintenance engineer, recalled an incident in the mid-2000's when nearly 90 barricades disappeared over a span of several weeks while construction crews repaired Brighton Avenue. "Every time we put new parking barricades out, they got stolen," Mr. Parmley said. The barricades still are missing.

Rich Stallcup 1944 – 2012

By Point Reyes Bird Observatory

Rich Stallcup, revered birder, naturalist, ecologist, teacher, conservation advocate and beloved friend, passed away Saturday from complications associated with leukemia. Rich dedicated his entire life to understanding and protecting the natural world. He inspired and taught thousands of people about the beauty and magic of birds and nature.

Rich's contributions to conservation in California and beyond are innumerable. He was only a teenager when he shared a vision that resulted in establishing the country's first bird observatory at Point Reyes almost 48 years ago – Point Reyes Bird Observatory, now PRBO Conservation Science (PRBO). He was integral to PRBO's growth and success ever since.

"Rich was a champion for nature and all things wild," said Ellie Cohen, PRBO's President and CEO. "He was also an incredibly loving, kind and generous human being. We have lost a true conservation hero, the likes of whom we will never know again. Yet, we can celebrate his remarkable life because his legacy lives on in so many of us."

In the early 1960's, Rich co-discovered the amazing spring and fall "vagrant" bird phenomenon on outer Point Reyes and other "migrant traps" along the coast. From 1976 to 1988, Rich was an owner and trip leader for WINGS birding tours. He also led more than 1,000 PRBO trips, bird walks, and open ocean nature tours over the decades. As Rich liked to say, he "brought nature to humans," hundreds of them each year, through his tours, trips, and trainings (including his uniquely effective "Bird School" and youth birding groups).

Rich served as president of Western Field Ornithologists, regional editor for American Birds, and a member of the California Bird Records Committee. He published numerous peer-reviewed scientific papers, 7 books about birds and 89 "Focus" articles in PRBO's quarterly journal, the Observer. Rich also worked with the Farallon Marine Sanctuary Association's Beach Watch Program, which designated him a "Star of the Sanctuary" for Cordell Bank in 1998. In 2002, the American Birding Association presented Rich with the prestigious Ludlow Griscom Award for outstanding contributions to American ornithology.

"To say that Rich Stallcup had a massive influence on birding and natural history in the great state of California would be a huge understatement. Everyone knew him, everyone had learned from him. But his influence spread far, far beyond the boundaries of California," wrote Kenn Kaufman, a birding expert and field guide author on his blog on Monday. "...All over California, all over the world, thousands of people are undoubtedly having the same experience right now, sharing stories and smiling at memories of a man who lived so passionately and gave so much."

Rich had a certain "magical" ability to find and understand birds, mammals, amphibians, reptiles and dragonflies. "Walking through the forest, scanning the cerulean California sky, or watching the roiling waves with Rich [was] like adding another sense to one's own. He seem[ed] to anticipate an animal's presence before it [was] visible or audible," said Jules Evens, director of Avocet Research Associates and a long time PRBO research associate.

Events to commemorate Rich Stallcup's inspired and inspiring life will be scheduled in the near future. For more information, please visit www.prbo.org

Some compromise reached on DBOC

Drakes Bay Oyster Company and the federal government reached a practical compromise on some aspects of Secretary Salazar's November 29 order that DBOC vacate Drakes Estero by the end of February.

The parties agreed that DBOC may remove oyster spat, or seed, now in the water and plant it on oyster racks. This eliminates the threat of layoffs during the holidays and, as Kevin Lunny said Tuesday, keeps staff productive.

Under the agreement, employee housing doesn't have to be removed. DBOC will not be responsible for the removal if it loses its request for a preliminary injunction, which will be heard on January 25 in Oakland federal district court. The deadline to remove all other property was extended to March 15.

Lunny said he is "absolutely" pleased with what his attorneys are calling "a minor victory" but added that he "can't read too much into it." While he's confident the preliminary injunction will be granted, he recognizes the financial risk of planting oysters that may have to be removed if it isn't. He said also that he doesn't feel like DBOC is "going it alone." He feels "the love and support" of his neighbors.

Monday evening the Lunnys held their annual staff holiday party at Rancho Nicasio. Sixty to seventy people were there. Although Lunny is confident about his case, he told his DBOC employees that if they see an opportunity for a job, they should take it, but they said they'll remain until the last day. -Lynn Axelrod

The Secret of the Unhewn Stone/Last day of Saturnalia/Acca Larentis

This is the blank day of the Celtic tree calendar, the only day in the year not ruled by a tree and its corresponding ogham letter. Its name, the Secret of the Unhewn Stone, denotes the quality of potential in all things. As the Roman festival of Acca Larentis, today is sacred to the goddess Laurentina, mother of the Lares, an earth goddess who guards the dead and the seed corn. She commemorates the old year and the potential of the new.

24 December

Celtic tree month of Beth commences

The birch tree month, corresponding with the ogham letter Beth, is a time of purification and new beginnings.

25 December

Christmas Day/Goddess month of Astraea ends

The observance of Christmas contains many elements from a number of different religious sources. The many ceremonies and religious sources of the day make it the most important festival of the year.
