MAINSTREET MOMS ANNUAL SOUP AND SOLUTIONS

Enjoy a bowl of homemade soup and learn about high volume horizontal hydraulic fracturing (fracking), a toxin-laden method of obtaining natural gas from bedrock that is rapidly expanding throughout the U.S., even in California, with 10s of thousands of wells already in existence and 100s of thousands more wells planned. Learn with us through speakers and conversation about what it is, its dangers, and what can we do about it here in California.

Go to Health: Cold chain problem for vaccines – can silk worms help?

The elimination of serious infectious diseases such as small pox and polio requires immense international collaborative effort. The World Health Organization, UNICEF, the Rotary Foundation, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and many other groups are currently working on a number of infectious diseases, such as polio, tuberculosis, HIV/AIDS and diarrheal diseases. Small pox was successfully eradicated in 1977, a momentous victory that required decades of work. For polio and other serious infectious diseases, problems in poor countries include wars, lack of basic health infrastructure, lack of roads and electricity, ignorance and suspicion of the West, and anger stemming from the purported misuse of a Hepatitis B immunization program in Abbottabad to obtain DNA samples from suspected relatives of Osama bin Laden. Workers bravely carrying out immunization campaigns in Pakistan, despite a fatwa from Islamist groups prohibiting vaccination, were killed in December 2012, and again January of 2013. In resource-poor countries infectious diseases make up more than half of all deaths, and those who most need effective vaccines and antibiotics may not get them

One of the problems with vaccination campaigns is the need to keep vaccines cold, when transporting them in hot areas which lack refrigeration. High temperatures are found to destroy almost half of the vaccines produced around the world. Polio vaccine must be kept at 35 to 46 degrees F for vaccination to be successful. Antibiotics and other medications also need to be protected from heat. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), as recently as 2008, almost half of all vaccines delivered to developing countries were ruined due to poor cold chain services. Further, cold chain “breaks” lead to ineffective vaccines being administered with a consequent loss of life and lack of vaccine compliance.

Researchers at Tufts University have found that vaccines and other drugs can be stabilized in silk protein made from silkworm cocoons, enabling them to withstand temperatures as high as 140 degrees F for over 6 months. They start with silkworm cocoons, boil them with sodium carbonate to separate a protein called fibroin, mix this with salt, then mix it with the substance to be preserved (the vaccine, or drug) and spread the result out as films, then freeze-dry it. The films contain a fibroin matrix filled with tiny pockets that contain the medicine. They are surprisingly stable for up to six months, regardless of temperature. Silk protein is acceptable to the human body, used in wound closure, and may even have wound healing properties that are under investigation. It can be taken orally without problems. Ultimately, substances made from silk may be used to replace a vein or a bone in the human body.

A team of four students from Harvard started a company, Vaxess Technologies, that is producing the new products, vaccines and medications, incorporated in silk fibroin. In cooperation with the Tufts professors who developed the new silk technology, Vaxess hopes to have a product that will solve the cold-chain problem within a few years. You can watch an interesting video on the new silk technologies presented by Fiorenzo Omenetto (one of the Tufts professors) on TED or youtube.

Dear readers of this column – I will be taking a few months off to revise a novel I wrote some time ago, concerning coming of age, sexual awakening and illegal abortion in the 1950’s. My experiences with illegal abortion as a medical student may be pertinent today as the issue is so topical. After self-publishing, I plan to return to this column.

THREE GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE....

(1) Plum blossoms!

(2) Now that Imbolc (the Celtic celebration we call Groundhog Day) is over, we're three quarters of the way through the dark half of the year, which ends with the spring equinox.

(3) Dylan Squires, who (along with Michael Pinkham & Danny Vitali) pumped out some astounding blues guitar and vocals at the crab feed last weekend.

NOTICE:

Bring your binoculars and join birdwatchers and history buffs flocking to Vallejo this weekend to celebrate the birds of the Pacific Flyway and explore the great marshes of the North Bay with dozens of expert leaders. It starts with a free catered Art Opening Friday evening and includes walking and van tours of historic Mare Island naval yards, cemetery, boat tour, chapel, etc. This is the one time of year that the public can visit Skaggs Island (an old spy base) and see the amazing populations of raptors: kites, harriers, falcons, owls, hawks, and a rare colony of burrowing owls. The schedule is all on-line, there are signs and car pools and everything is free and run by volunteers (donations welcome). There are talks, videos, booths and live raptor demos. Stare into the eyes of a Eurasian eagle hawk. If going over the hill for these opportunities sounds too far, think of all those birds flying to Alaska...

Thanks, Susan Berry

WEEKLY WRAP, RECAP, REVIEW, REDUX from Jenniepeiffer 2/4/13

We moved into February this week, and are looking at entering the Chinese New Year, Year of the Snake.

Saturday night was such a night! The Bolinas Community Crab Feast was fabulous! Thanks to all the fishing people who provided crab for over a hundred: Robbie, Nick, Don Jeremy, Todd and all the others who participated. The chefs made magical menu choices and everything was prepared beautifully by Wild Onion, Humble Kitchen, Food for Families, and the Kleider household. Heidi, Becca, Tanya, the June's, Susie Stewart, and so many more bakers and cooks stepped forward to make this a magical event. And a special thanks to Lia and Randi, our stalwart Community Center coordinators, for concept and organization. So much attention to detail. The hall looked beautiful. My apologies for any of the raggedy cake pieces that were served. Those few were not the fault of our trained professionals, but the fact that I was volunteering, and retired woodshop teacher that I am, all the cake pieces I cut looked like they were done with a saw. I guess I need that cake cutting class. Who knew? I've always thought, cake - you get it on the plates, then you eat it. Otherwise it was all divine, including the music, which was provided by Dylan Squires on guitar and vocals, Danny Vitali on bass, and was held down by Michael Pinkham on drums. Excellent.

The rest of my week was preparing for next Saturday's Sale at Brighton Square, next to the Post Office, sponsored by Unquities, celebrating our third anniversary. Hope to see you there, with stuff to sell, swap, donate, or bucks to buy things. I'm hearing that Carmen and Arn will be there with tamales. jp

4 February

King Frost Day

On this day in 1814, a fair was held in London in honor of King Frost on the river Thames, which was completely frozen over. The celebration of King Frost Day died out during World War I.

5 February

Nones of February/Tyche/Fortuna/Wyrd/St. Agatha

N St. Agatha is an aspect of the goddess known to the Greeks as Tyche, to the Romans as Fortuna (right), and to the Anglo-Saxons as Wyrd. This day is especially potent for fortune telling and all forms of divination.
