Wow what a fantastic big group this past Monday! Cass, Janet, Maittrella, Jasmin, Evelyn, Julia, Lily, Symon, Cora and Isatta poured off the boss and into the sunshine. We shared what Spring Break had in store for us; sleeping in, travels to Monterrey, Los Angeles, Santa Cruz and time to soak up the beach, were a few activities mentioned.

With backs free of heavy packs, we took our incredibly delicious Snack Bar ice cream to the waters edge. Our intentions were to walk to the rocks, but the wind whipped coolly so we hunkered down right out front. Cass shared a game her dad Leo invented. Cora thought GridWork would be a good name for it. A grid of squares was created in the sand. One person thinks of a pattern to get from one side to the other. Every player then tries to guess the pattern, when they stop on a wrong square, their turn is lost. It was a cool game of memo, geometry and paying attention. We also sat around a humungous abandoned tractor tire speaking of what boredom was and how to remedy. Janet and Isatta worked on a dance routine up on the cement.

As the 5 o'clock horn sounded, we gratefully entered the swanky Stinson Beach Library. We feel so fortunate to have this beautiful facility for our weekly tutoring and homework space, not to mention computers and new release movies! And this week, it was the school art show on display in the gallery. Truly amazing to see incredible puppets, vases, paintings, drawings and sculptures. What a testament to the talent and creativity of the young people of Bolinas-Stinson in addition to their art teachers. A must see! After tackling many math problems, we drifted down to The Den. This weeks discussion was where we saw ourselves in ten years. Initially everyone's eyes got wide, "I have no idea " being expressed again and again. "Oh wait, I'd be 22? 21?!" Then ideas and imaginings and dreams flowed out: "I definitely want to be in my own apartment" "I will be getting my masters in forensic science" "I will have a golden retriever" "I will have a good job" "I hope I am still friends with Isatta" and "I might be at Smileys" and "I hope I am not in an insane asylum" joked a few. Great food for thought overall.

Tasty Parkside Pizza accompanied our viewing of a film set in the White House. And some enjoyed a good game of billiards.

Congratulations to all who participated in Lisa Townsends production of Cast B. The show was

Paid Maternity Leave - Why it's Important

What does the U.S. have in common with Papua New Guinea and Suriname? It's not the tree kangaroo, or the singing dog (they harmonize when they howl together). It's that we are the only three nations to not guarantee paid maternity leave for working mothers.

According to a new study from McGill University and UCLA, for each additional month of paid maternity leave offered in low- and middle-income countries, infant mortality is reduced by 13%. The finding, published in the journal PLoS Medicine, marks the first time that research has examined the impact of paid maternity leave on infant mortality in poor and middle income countries. Previous work has shown that paid time off is consistently associated with lower mortality of babies under one year old in high-income countries.

"A significant number of countries where the vast majority of maternal and child deaths occur provide less than 12 weeks of paid leave to new mothers," said lead author Arijit Nandi, an Assistant Professor at McGill's Institute for Health and Social Policy. "Our findings suggest that paid maternity leave policies are a potential instrument for reducing preventable child deaths, even in countries where women are less likely to be working in the formal economy."

To carry out their analysis, researchers utilized statistics on approximately 300,000 children born over a period of eight years in 20 countries across Africa, Asia and Latin America, and combined that data with information on government maternity leave policies in those countries. They compared infant mortality rates in countries that expanded benefits with rates in countries where policies remained the same. The researchers found that adding one month to the length of paid leave prevents about 8 infant deaths per 1,000 live births, equivalent to a 13% reduction in mortality. The most significant life-saving effect of extending paid maternity leave occurs in the first year of life.

The study's authors theorize that paid and extended maternity leave may help to reduce infant mortality in several ways, including the following:

- Paid maternity leave, with its guarantee of income and job security, may reduce a woman's stress level, a known risk factor in preterm birth and low birth weight.

- Some policies permit time off as the due date approaches and that may allow expectant mothers easier access to third-trimester care.
- After her child is born, a mother on paid leave may have more time to seek medical attention and care for an ill child.
- A woman who takes time off from work at that point may be more likely to continue breastfeeding and to ensure that her baby receives vaccinations, both of which are important factors in infant health.

One hundred and eighty-eight countries guarantee paid leave of some sort for new mothers. In Canada as well as in many European countries, a new mother is entitled to up to one year of paid time off, at 55% to 80% of their wages.

"While this study focuses on low- and middle-income countries, the impact in high-income countries is also well demonstrated. For the health of our children and the well-being of families, the U.S. needs to catch up with most of the world and ensure all new parents have paid parental leave," said study author Dr. Jody Heymann, formerly of McGill and now dean of the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health and founding director of the WORLD Policy Analysis Center.

For the record, our infant mortality rate is higher than that of Hungary, Poland, Slovakia or Cuba.

California does provide some paid maternity leave. Women can take up to 4 months of job-protected disability leave (unpaid) and under some circumstances paid disability leave (55% of previous salary) as long as medically necessary. Understanding the intricacies of these laws is confusing. San Francisco has just passed an ordinance that gives new parents (mothers and fathers) 100% of their salary for 6 weeks if their employer has 20 employees. New York has just passed a law giving new parents 12 weeks of paid leave, at 50% of a worker's paycheck. Both Sanders and Clinton have spoken in favor of paid parental leave, although they differ on how to pay for the program. The new study from McGill and UCLA has come just in time to stir our national conscience. Parents need time to bond with their newborns. The benefits of such bonding can be life-long.

A Question to the Coastal Commission:

What is the driving force behind the Coastal Commission initiative to restrict residential spaces in village downtown areas? Don't they get it that housing in our small communities is already being taken over by tourist renters in the forms of Air B & B and sales of properties to out of town wealthy people who want a weekend retreat?

What about the reasonably priced rental housing provided to local residents and community members in downtown Bolinas by the Bolinas Community Land Trust?

Thanks for your attention to this very serious threat to West Marin villages.

Anne Sands
Past Marin County Planning Commission Chair

An Answer:

Anne -

Policies C-PK-1 and C-PK-3 are closely related policies that address visitor-serving uses in the coastal zone. Specifically, Policy C-PK-1 establishes a priority for visitor-serving and commercial recreational facilities over residential or general commercial on lands designated for commercial or recreational uses. Policy C-PK-3 supports a continued mix of residential and commercial uses in coastal village areas while generally discouraging new ground floor residential uses. Together, these policies are intended to encourage visitor-serving uses while maintaining the established character of existing village commercial areas which serve visitors to the coastal zone as well as the residents of West Marin.

Coastal Commission staff has stated that there should be a specific mechanism to prioritize visitor-serving uses in coastal village areas. The LCP Amendment proposes a new provision that has the effect of giving priority to commercial uses in the village visitor core by requiring a use permit for ground-floor residences facing the street, a feature not provided by the existing certified LCP. This provision provides an expedited path for commercial/ visitor- establishments over residences.

This provision does not prohibit new or existing residential uses. Since both commercial and residential uses are allowed in the C-VCR zoning district, for properties within the proposed commercial core area, residential is allowed on the a) upper floors, or b) lower floors if NOT on the road facing side of the property without any further restrictions. However, if a residential use is proposed on the ground floor on the road facing side of the property, then a Use Permit is required. A finding has to be made that the development maintains and or enhances the established village character of the commercial area.

At the hearing on April 19th, the Board of Supervisors will discuss the approach of this provision measure and whether additional changes should be made before it is adopted. This hearing is just one step in the process to evaluate this

WHAT HAPPENED THIS WEEK

4/11/16 Monday Morning Recap from Jenniepeiffer

This weekend our community was presented with yet another outstanding opportunity to enjoy delightful performance work without having to travel any farther than our own down town. Author Muriel A. Murch, Bolinas' "Aggie", directed a reading of "Doctor Patel Comes to Tea", a story from her recent publication, "THE BELL LAP: Stories for Compassionate Nursing Care." It was a book launch, a live performance benefit for KWMR Radio, in our excellent Community Center, humorously and solidly enacted by an excellent cast of West Marin personalities: Rosie Barry, Mo Blumenthal, Joe Blumenthal, Howard Dillon, and Lyons Filmer; with lights by Don Smith, and oh so realistic sound work by Charlie Docherty. It is a story presenting the sensitive topic of aging, (a topic on many of our minds these days) done in a loving and compassionate way with Aggie's delightfully humorous turn of phrase. Her work is very insightful and I'm eager to read the rest of the book. I almost let the cozy warmth of hearth and home keep me from venturing out in the drippy night, but I'm so glad I made the last minute mad dash down town, and thankfully, there were a few close by parking spots -- so unusual these days, definitely an advantage of a rainy weekend.

I'm thankful for our Community Center, and the people who keep it running for us: Lia, Randi, Katie, and all the volunteer Board members. This was the second weekend in a row that the center was the staging facility for an entertaining theatrical piece. Last week, B-CAST -- Bolinas/Stinson Beach Children's After School Theater -- performed musical and dramatic selections from 14 well-known playwrights. The seventeen participants, all students at the Bolinas-Stinson kindergarten through 8th grade school, blossomed into poised stage personalities right before our eyes. Lisa Townsend, director, and Amber Di Stasi, assistant director, did an amazing job getting these young actors stage ready and prepared for this large undertaking. Excellent work all. JP proposal. Additional steps include bringing this provision forward with the rest of the Local Coastal Program Amendments to the California Coastal Commission, tentatively scheduled for August 2016, for certification. Once certified by the Coastal Commission, County staff will begin a public outreach process to meet and engage with residents in each village communities to obtain your feedback.

P.S. For those keeping tract of the ants, the ground must be totally saturated, as the ants are showing up in force. They are everywhere in our kitchen and beyond. Spring is here.

You should write a letter or attend the Board hearing on April 19th to provide your feedback on this issue. Please note that there will be further opportunities to provide input at public hearings before the Coastal Commission, Planning Commission, and Board of Supervisors regarding this issue, in addition to future community meetings as discussed above.

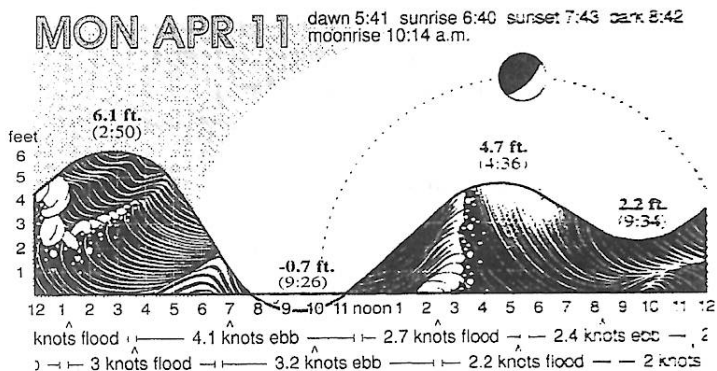

Please contact me at 415-473-6290 if you have further questions.

Regards,
Kristin Drumm
