This is it! Please join West Marin Coalition for Healthy Youth and our Transition Age Youth-Innovators tonight; meet youth, young adults and adult allies to youth who will host our final community cafe in Stinson Beach at the Community Center. Food from the Parkside Cafe, many good people and much good will have grown with this project. We thank you in advance for valuing youth, young adults and families in our community. We look forward to hearing your best ideas for supporting youth, young adults and their families living in Bolinas/Stinson Beach/Muir Beach and Dogtown region. Whether your student attends Bolinas School, Tamalpais High School, Drake, Redwood or Tomales High Schools we hope you will join us tonight. If your student attends one of the middle schools in West Marin, including West Marin School, Lagunitas, Nicasio or Tomales Elementary School or is homeschooled, we want your voice integrated into the finding for this final Cafe. Please share this message and encourage folks to show up. Thanks.

Phthalates – what are they, and what you can do to avoid them

Phthalates are chemical substances widely used in plastics to increase their flexibility, transparency, and durability. They are of concern because recent studies have shown that they may affect human health by being endocrine disruptors. This means that they may affect the fetus during pregnancy, and may also be implicated in reduced fertility, obesity, diabetes, endometriosis and some cancers. There is concern that the development of the male fetus and male fertility may be especially affected.

A recent study from the University of California in Berkeley and San Francisco, and George Washington University, found that people who ate out more regularly tended to have significantly higher levels of phthalates in their urine. Researchers looked at people consuming food from restaurants, cafeterias, fast-food locations, or other dining establishments. They analyzed data on 10,253 people who were 6 years and older that was collected from 2005 to 2014 as part of the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES). This data included phthalate concentrations from their urine samples and the frequency at which they ate out versus at home. Those who regularly ate out had 35% higher phthalate levels than those who did not. This difference was even higher for adolescents: 55%. The culprit didn't seem to be the core ingredients of the food, but possibly something involved in the preparation of the food. For example, the study revealed that eating sandwiches (including cheeseburgers) prepared outside the home was associated with higher urine phthalate levels compared to eating sandwiches prepared at home. Many eating establishments use plastic containers, machine parts, packaging, and other items to handle, process, and store food. Phthalates are chemicals used in many plastic items to help them become more flexible. Therefore, phthalates may be leeching from all of these plastic items into the food that subsequently goes into your mouth.

Here are some ways to decrease your exposure to plastics, according to the Natural Resources Defense Council. You can't eliminate all plastic, but you can take some easy steps to reduce your plastic use. Swap plastic food storage containers with glass or stainless steel; if you do keep plastic ones, don't use them to store fatty foods, and never microwave them. Replace plastic bags with reusable lunch bags, and plastic cling wrap with beeswax-coated cloth. Choose hard wood blocks and cotton baby dolls over plastic ones. In short, anytime you're in the market for something plastic, research whether safer alternatives exist. Canned foods can make meal prep a breeze, but those cans are likely lined with BPA to keep them from corroding. Even cans labeled "BPA-free" may use a similar chemical that hasn't been proved any safer. Choosing fresh, frozen, or dried foods (like beans) that aren't packaged in cans—is a smart preventive measure. Aseptic "brick" cartons or glass packaging are both better than cans.

FIRE CADET PROGRAM

The Bolinas Fire Protection District is accepting applications for the new Fire Cadet Program. The purpose of the Fire Cadet Program is to provide young men and women an inside look of the fire and emergency medicine profession, to help them make the decision of whether they want to pursue a career in this field. This program will help cadets gain experience as they observe and train with firefighters and assist the Department. Each cadet will learn mental and physical wellness, a sense of self-responsibility, personal growth, leadership, teamwork, and fire prevention skills. Anyone between the ages of 16 and 18 years old who lives in the Fire District and can meet the minimum qualifications may apply to participate in the Fire Cadet Program. The Volunteer Firefighters train on Thursday nights from 7 to 9 pm. and on some Saturdays. The Cadets are expected to attend and train on these days with the regular Volunteers unless it interferes with schooling. An additional schedule of training can be set up for the Cadets so both schooling and department training priorities can be met. If you are interested, please contact the Bolinas Fire Protection District at 868-1566.

WHAT HAPPENED

4-2-18 Week in Review

Monday Morning Recap from Jennie Pfeiffer

Well, we fooled around into April, with Easter falling on April Fools' Day and egg hunts all around the Mesa and Downtown Park. I hope no one got any "trick" bad eggs. I heard there was an April fool's tweet from Jesus. Would that all those tweets from our bogus POTUS were just such jokes.

Some "thank you" announcements are in order for the awesome planning that went into some happy events of the week. Thank you Magica and Olivia (with help from Breeze) for hosting the egg hunt and bake sale yesterday morning in the Downtown Park. There were hundreds of treats stuffed into eggs hidden around the park for happy hunters, making many magical Magica moments for kids.

Moving from there around the corner, there was a noon time town photo shoot in front of the Calvary Church, with many enthusiastic members of the community representing. Unfortunately, quite a few were missing, due to the variety of egg hunting events around town, and the apparent rumor that this was an April Fools' hoax. I thought it was a clever concept to get those of us outside the congregation, on to the Calvary steps for the photo shoot, then into the vestibule for some excellent treats, then easing us toward the pews. It was a nice maneuver, with a beautiful array of food, even some chocolate covered matzos as a nod to Passover celebrants, but they didn't reckon with the capacity for sustained conversation among the participants that spilled back out on to the street instead of joining the faithful. Thanks to those Presbyterian hosts for their gracious invitation.

Saturday's celebrations were wonderful as well. At noon there was Bud's chili and cornbread served up with champagne at the cemetery, for a story-filled trip down memory lane, remembering Bud Spangler. We joined Jody and her beautiful daughters and grandkids at the interment of her father's ashes, accompanied by some delightful reminiscences of this long time toast master of the town. There were many memories of back in the day, when Bud and Gwen opened the SHOP restaurant and ice cream parlor that served as a first job experience for many of our local kids as they ate their way through learning how to scoop up a proper ice cream cone. Love and condolences to Jody, Ray, and the family and thanks for a flashback to how it was in those days of yesteryear.

Saturday night was the annual Freebox Follies, with some amazing couture by Amelia Straton, among others, and some noteworthy trips around the runway, particularly by some of our youngest kiddos who found their inner grownup and overcame self-consciousness to reach some higher calling (Mighty mini Mixu, barely 3, if that, hitting Twinkle, Twinkle out of the park). There were some talented performances including: amazing aerial trapeze work by Shannon Gray, looking every bit the Blackbird; Martine with a humorous Freebox Anthem and then another by Mia Caron; an amazing crow story by Julie; some super mother-daughter duets by Amanda and Bella Mann; a resurrection of Johnny Mathis by Seanny Mathis; Jan Broek on guitar and vocals; an outrageous Men's Fashions segment with some upstanding locals modeling quintessential StuArt paintings on fabulous Freebox finds; some marvelous MC'ing by Sam Weismiller & Maya Giannini; more models than I can mention; and an ending all-cast Bubble Dance finale that led to a pushing away of chairs and a pulling in of the audience for a cacophony of ecstatic dance -- babies and old ladies and everyone in between -- that lasted into the night. It was definitely one for the annals.

Serious business midweek was more about the need for affordable housing. Thursday there was a meeting at the Bolinas Campus that included school administration, Trustees, school staff reps, Bolinas Land Trust reps, all meeting with County Supervisor Rodoni, strategizing ways to meet the needs of school worker housing. More to come on this.

And it's off at breakneck speed to start a long month, so pace yourselves -- it's spring! jp
