Successful Weight Control

A recent article in the New York Times showed that people who succeeded in losing large amounts of weight – say from 430 pounds to 190 – were rarely able to stay at their new weights. Most of the dieters in the New York Times article had lost large amounts of weight rapidly, as contestants in The Biggest Loser television program. When they began dieting they had normal metabolisms for their body size. When they had lost weight, their metabolisms had slowed radically and their bodies were not burning enough calories to maintain their thinner sizes. As the years went by their metabolisms did not recover, so they kept gaining back weight. It seemed that their bodies were working to pull the dieters back to their original weights. Investigators also found that the dieters had very low levels of leptin, a hormone made by fat cells that inhibits hunger. They were unable to detect satiety (feeling full).

This is discouraging news to people who want to lose weight for health reasons, such as having diabetes or certain kinds of heart disease. Research is ongoing on ways to improve this situation.

Are there other models of weight loss that would be more effective in the long term? We will look at the National Weight Control Registry for ideas. This organization was started by researchers from Brown Medical School and the University of Colorado, to look at people who have lost weight (at least 30 pounds) and kept it off for a year or more. People enroll voluntarily; 80% are women, and 20% men. On the average, weight loss has been 66 pounds, kept off for 5.5 years. Most people report maintaining a low calorie, low fat diet (25% fat) and doing high levels of physical activity. 78% eat breakfast daily; 75% weigh themselves at least once a week; 62% watch less than 10 hours of TV per week; 90% exercise, on average, about 1 hour per day. Changing beverage consumption to low/no calorie sweetened drinks is felt to be very important for weight loss and maintenance by the participants. People in the registry varied in the amount of exercise they did, and in their dietary plans. There was no 'one size fits all' formula being followed.

Dr. Barbara Rolls at Penn State University has written several popular books on making weight loss easier. Her latest is The Ultimate Volumetrics Diet. She has looked at ways to change the

A Response to Mary Barror About the Park

That lane on the right side going into the Downtown Park, is a Fire Lane and a driveway easement into Miguel Bustemante's private property. The chain is there to dissuade multiple obstructions (ie. cars) parked and left there while people (local and unlocal) leave and go to the beach, stores, and anywhere else while obstructing the right of way. There was a locking gate designed for that spot but the funding ran out.

Multiple Keys were copied and given out by Miguel to the Park Board for the Fire Dept., Park maintenance, etc. What happened from there is who knows! Blaming this wonderful Dentist without inquiring, and writing an attack letter against him, and circulating a petition, is not the Bolinas loving attitude, that I usually find from you..

Knowing a lot about the issue and witnessing many cars left there since I do "hang in the park" I can say it is not a good idea to have floating keys on that spot.

Imagine a fire on the hillside, or the back of the Gibson House, or Sam's house with a bunch of cars parked there. One time we needed emergency services to come in and revive someone who was OUT there. One time a woman was up on the hillside, whacked out, and refusing to come down... the Sheriffs drove in and ... she came down,

There is an opening to the Park to reach the bathrooms, (much easier to not walk on that gravel.) And there are bathrooms at the Com. Cntr. I did enjoy the picnic, and thank you and family for it, and am sorry if it was difficult but had you asked Miguel ahead of time, he would have graciously acomodated you, as he does with us all..

THREE GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE...

- Buckeye blossoms, pretty much the end of the booming blooming season. Summer impends.
- The annual Mothers' Day pancake breakfast at the Firehouse—the usual roaring success.
- Kathy Hart (Stevens), a wonderful person who died this week. Kathy and I came to Bolinas together in the early 70's. I'm very sad that she's gone.

amount of water in foods, thereby adding weight and volume but no calories. This is done by adding vegetables to each recipe, and making sure the food is tasty. The result, found in careful studies, was that people reduced their calorie intake by about 25%. In a trial of 700 people, she found that when people ate a diet that was less calorie dense (more vegetables included) they were eating significantly more food – about a pound more food a day – yet they were eating fewer calories and easily losing more weight. She has many good ideas, backed by research, that keep people healthy while losing weight slowly. Read this book if you are frustrated about your weight. And, whenever possible, keep moving!

WHAT HAPPENED THIS WEEK

5/9/16 Monday Morning Recap from Jenniepfeiffer

It was a busy week in our town, culminating in yesterday's Mom fest, family fantastic breakfast at the firehouse, cooked up by our fabulous fire fighting volunteers. Big thanks to all the pancake flippers, egg scramblers (eggs so generously donated by Tacherra's) and bacon fryers. Not sure who to thank for the bacon, but there was sure a lot of it, along with mounds of butter that I understand was donated by Clover. It started us off on a fine Mother's Day morning, with many mothers enjoying the event with their families.

Bolinas: where all the women and Moms are strong, men flip pancakes, and children ask interesting questions.

Our family went from there on a walk to Sally Robert's open studio garden tour. The roses in her garden are exquisite. I especially was taken with the "Hot Cocoa" variety, a dusty rose that is unusual and very striking. All the plants and pond life make a very serene, meditative environment and are all captured so artfully in her magnificent watercolors. We bumped into many friends there, part of a circuit making the openings around town, the light drippy weather making it easier to get around with fewer cars coming into town. I unfortunately missed yesterday's end of the day Mother's Day potluck at the Community Center, a lovely idea.

There were native plants available at Larner Seeds, and I'm hoping to get there for some of their wildflower mixes.

The rainy morning Saturday did interfere with the Family Fun Day at Mesa Park, but they pressed on regardless. It is the annual fundraiser for the Bolinas Children's Center, so I'm sure that was disappointing for them. I know they depend on that event to help them keep their excellent program running, so those who didn't get there will have to find other ways to donate.

The clouds didn't seem to dampen the spirits of the Salsa Band, "La Mixta Criolla", playing in the Museum plaza. I heard their lively music in between raindrops as I checked out the art opening at Bolinas Gallery – interesting paintings and sculpture by Brandon Stieg, and beautiful photos by Nick Allen. I enjoyed the exhibit, the second month in a row for exceptional photography, following as it was, the excellent work of Shayne Skower there in April.

Two other openings on Saturday took us from the Farm Stand "Conversations: Harmony of Change" by painters Arline Mathieu and Tim Burns, so beautiful under over-cast skies; to La Sirena Bo-Tique next to the Gas pumps, that is a new collective in town with beautiful hand crafted work by local women. Thanks Schehera, Emery, Chou Chou, Katie for hand work, and Emma Lee for music.

That's the music and art of it with time running out, so no meeting review of Monday's school Strategic Planning retreat and Wednesday's Meet the Candidate's Night with all 8 of the people running for our district's Marin Board of Supervisor's Steve Kinsey spot. All 8 had something to say to recommend them, but my take-away is a firm support of Rodoni. He knows water issues, knows the difficulty of trying to maintain small town integrity while being over run by visitors and short term rental takeovers, and he is a supporter of West Marin farmers and ranchers. Others are good, but Rodoni is my pick. More later, POR, jp
