WESLA WHITFIELD SINGS THE GREAT AMERICAN SONGBOOK WITH THE MIKE GREENSILL DUO

Wesla Whitfield inhabits that indeterminate zone where jazz and cabaret meet. Trained in classical music and opera, Whitfield has toiled for more than three decades to become one of the most gifted performers breathing life into that exquisite body of Broadway tunes, movie songs, and Hit Parade numbers known collectively as the Great American Songbook. Though based in San Francisco, Whitfield now spends much of her time in New York, working such noted rooms as the Algonquin Oak Room, Le Jazz Au Bar, The Metropolitan Room, and Joe's Pub at New York's Public Theater, her current aerie. She has also appeared in concert at New York Town Hall, Avery Fisher Hall, and Carnegie Hall. Saturday, August 20, 8:00 p.m. / Advance tickets $27 general, $25 senior; Day of show $30 general, $28 seniors

Dessert Table for Labor Day-September 5th, 2011

In the past we have been able to raise substantial funds to support the Community via the BCC. We can do this again if people pitch in and help. Anyone in town who can bake something and bring it to the table will be greatly welcomed! If your not a baker think about helping run the table for an hour or two. I will be helping throughout the day and hope others come forward to volunteer in whatever way they are able. Much thanks, in advance! June-9052

OPEN LETTERS BY JORY JOHN & AVERY MONSEN

Dear Phantom Vibration In My Leg,

For a second, I thought I was getting a call, but then I realized my cell phone was way over there, on that table. This has been happening more and more, recently, and it's disconcerting, to say the least. Are you trying to tell me something, Phantom Vibration? Should I not be carrying my phone so close to my body? Or is my leg somehow connected to satellite technology and someone, somewhere, is just trying to get in touch with my upper thigh?

Please advise,
 Concerned About My Health

THREE MORE GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE...

- (1) Coffee in the sunshine on the deck this morning--first time this 'summer!' More to come, I hope.
 - (2) My sister Laurie's garden in Mill Valley--overflowing with an abundance of fruit and vegetables. Okay, I'm envious.
 - (3) Driving up the Olema Valley to Inverness on a golden afternoon. It has to be one of the most charming scenic routes in the nation.

MONDAY MORNING WEEK IN REVIEW 8-15-11

JENNIEPFRIFTER-RILEY RECAP

THE FRIDAY NIGHT/SATURDAY MORNING FULL MOON BROUGHT IN SOME HIGH TIDES AND SOME WAY APPRECIATED MORNING SUNSHINE, giving a boost to the spirits of the happy participants of yesterday's 2nd Sunday Sale on the Square at Uniquities Salon, putting us all in a party mood. This month's Flea Market and Bizarre Bazaar brought in a nice selection of interesting clothes and household objects available for sale, alongside Marcella's very digestible, Delectable Comestibles. Carmen and Arn had last minute obligations elsewhere, so unfortunately, we missed their tamales this month, but Max was down at the corner with his BoBo Burritos, a nice addition to the lunchtime cuisine.

I look forward to these monthly shop and swap days - King of Diamonds Days, because someone donated three large colorful King of Diamonds banners which I like to use as our flea market flags signaling the start of the day's 2nd Sunday Sale. I enjoy the serendipity of who shows up with what, the first timers along with the "regulars." I always love seeing StuArt roll in with his art buggy full of fanciful hand made shrines and objects d'art, and this time he had some wonderful hand painted images of the Bolinas patron saint, San Ilob, (Bolinas spelled backwards) and a new batch of Salvadore Dali neckties, which you just can't hardly get anywhere else on the planet. StuArt always has his guitar along, and Ned likes to bring his fiddle on down, which means I get to pull out my concertina and we make a little music, open to anyone who wants to join in with us. It's fun when people, sometimes with dogs and children, and amusing stories, drift in and out, staying awhile before moving on with the day, spending a little time in Beha's Brighton Square, which she liked to call B right on Square. She was an organizer of the first of the sales so I was thinking of her yesterday when, now and then, some hymns would float through the air on their way from the robust voices at St. Aidens Church to the host of our dear departed, somewhere at the back of beyond. (Mimi said Italo rings the bell there.)

Llewellyn Ludlow has some of his paintings now on display in the Uniquities Salon Gallery for the month, giving beautiful ocean views to look at while you get your hair done, or if no hair grooming is necessary, you can drop in when Uniquities is open, most days noon to 5.

My choice for the absolute most heart-warming event of the week was the wonderful S'wonderful George Gershwin revue in the Community Center, put on by members of the Theater on the Lagoon Summer Program, open to all ages and delightfully directed and choreographed by Molly Maguire and Lisa Townsend. Excellent piano accompaniment was by the ever-professional and always engaging Bill Quist. I saw Saturday's performance and there were at least 23 students, and 15 adult choralers, and somehow they all got where they needed to be and remembered what they were supposed to sing. Chelsey Meyer, Sophia Rose, Celeste Kurnik, Olivia Harmon, & Cameron Hall all did fine jobs with the speaking parts (Jeffrey Manson was a participant on Friday according to the program), and even the tiniest performers had their parts perfected. Everyone seemed to be having a great time. Very charming.

So another full week and while it's all good, it's all even better when the sun is shining. jp

Michael:

Sorry for the state of the instructions. I did not realize you would encourage links to web sites, however here it is:

http://www.squidoo.com/nornet_trap

I know these work from personal experience as well as the referral from the Marin/ Sonoma abatement dept. technician. I also really like the beach carrion bait idea, as we may get a cleaner beach in the process.

Hi, Steve --

This looks like an incomplete section of a site that describes how to build a yellow jacket trap. I'm glad it works for you using beach carrion, but these instructions are incomplete as is... for instance, the first sentence says "Cut out section opposite of the handle." What handle? What is it talking about.

I would prefer to let people look at the website for the complete description of what this is about.

Something like the following might work to put in the hearsay:

Steve Heaslip recommends making your own yellowjacket trap as described in the following website: <http://www.xvzabc.com>

Let me know.

Thanks.

I am submitting this yellowjacket trap information for Hearsay readers. Beach marine carrion is great bait for these traps. Our various recycling and trash bins attract yellowjackets in droves. The following was recommended to me by the Marin / Sonoma mosquito abatement dept. Very economical and effective.

More detailed directions.

Cut out section opposite of the handle. I just flipped up the cut out section. It can also be completely cut off. I have experimented with all types of meat, including raw and cooked hamburger, steak, and raw bacon. The fish stays together the best and captured the most hornets. I buy fish

W.S. Merwin: US Poet Laureate Enchants Local Crowd

by Steve Heilig, MPH, Director of Public Health and Education

On February 13, almost 250 people came to Commonweal from far and wide for the rare opportunity to hear U.S. Poet Laureate W.S. Merwin give a reading in West Marin. His appearance—a conversation with author/artist Eric Karpeles, a Commonweal board member—was co-sponsored by The New School at Commonweal and Point Reyes Books.

Winner of too many awards to list, including two Pulitzers and the National Book Award, and renowned not only for his verse and prose but also for his environmental advocacy where he lives in Hawaii and beyond, Merwin was engaging and scholarly and erudite. But it was something about the depth of his feelings and the commitment of his presentation that evoked the longest spontaneous standing ovation I'd ever seen at a literary event. Merwin's words—memories of other legendary poets he has known, and other reflections by him and Karpeles—cast a spell.

By way of introduction, Merwin said,

The activities that make the news are so full of things that begin with greed. It's a great joy and great reassurance to suddenly be surrounded by hearts and actions that emerge from generosity. The generosity that has made Commonweal—and (sustains) all that you are doing—is heartening. It's the wonderful news that we don't get from the papers very much. Thank you.

As noted in an LA Times profile last summer, Merwin has long labored in his Hawaiian garden (formerly a depleted plantation), creating a "dark, wet canopy (with) towering, philodendron-draped mangoes" and some 700 species of palm trees, every one planted personally by him. His poetry—and his purpose as poet laureate—reflect this dedication to improving the situation on the earth.

If there is a "theme" to my taking this laureate position, it is something opposite to the direction our society is going. I see us as rushing head-on to a stone wall, or over a cliff. It is self-destructive.

We are extremely arrogant. What makes us think we are superior to other species? Is it just because we think so? The thing that distinguishes us from other animals is neither intelligence nor language—it is imagination. But even imagination is not unique to us—we have footage of other mammals saying goodbye, mourning, and so forth. But it is imagination that allows us compassion... If we dishonor that, exploit that, destroy that, we destroy ourselves. And if poetry disappears from our language, we will be less of a species, and have a bleaker future.

I know these words will not change anything. People will go on behaving as they will. But to not even try to say this—I know I would regret that.

Merwin had much more to say, and read, of course. Some of it was beyond me. Some of it was beyond words, as he said the best poetry often is. So I'll just relay this little exchange I had with the poet, who was generous with his time:

When I looked at the "author's photo" on his 2005 book, Present Company, which he had just signed for me, I couldn't help but ask, "Who is

For the Anniversary of My Death

Every year without knowing it
I have passed the day
When the last fires will wave to me
And the silence will set out
Tireless traveler
Like the beam of a lightless star
Then I will no longer
Find myself in life as in a strange garment
Surprised at the earth
And the love of one woman
And the shamelessness of men
As today writing after three days of rain
Hearing the wren sing and the falling cease
And bowing not knowing to what that pup with you there?" He looked at the photo, paused a minute, took a deep breath, and said quietly, "That's Makana—the one I will mourn forever."

Now that's a poet after my own heart.

Prior to Merwin's public reading, a group of generous donors gathered with him for a fundraising brunch catered pro bono by renowned Chez Panisse chef Jean-Pierre Moulle, his wife, Denise, and their two daughters, Maude and Elsa. We are grateful to all for their support of The New School.
