EVERYBODY! GOES TO THE FREEBOX

Psalm 23, Free Box Version (FBV)

The Freebox is my Macy's, I need not shop.

It leadeth me to dig through piles of old pants shirts coats socks sweaters hats etc, plus strange objects some of which are mysterious indeed;

It replenisheth my already overflowing closet and cluttered car even tho I do bring stuff back;

Yay, tho I walk thru the valley of downtown in fifteen-year-old styles I will fear no fashion police:

For though at Labor Day barbeques a brother may sayeth, Lo; Verily I put that very shirt you are wearing into the Box five years ago, it comforts me;

and besides, he was wearing one of mine from ten years back, which giveth more good Karma;

The Box prepareth me to wear whatever seems remotely OK, from ratty nameless shorts to Armani, whatever; and annointeth my head with hats which provideth warmth in winter and shade in summer, and if lucky, no lice; my closet runneth over;

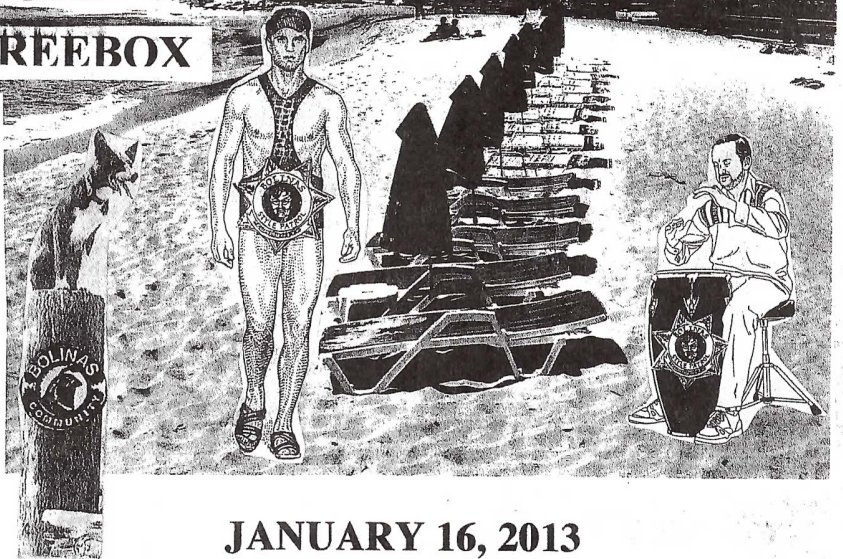

Surely I shall call this recycling, express gratitude for those who maintain it, and add no TVs, computers, other electronic crapola or any other forbidden junk and also replenish the Box with some items of value and help clean out the trash;

and I shall dwell in the Box of life and non-consumerism for ever or until it falls down, (whichever comes first).

- "Channeled" by Steve Heilig, no blasphemy intended (original below for comparison/insurance).

Psalm 23 - King James Version (KJV)

The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou annointest my head with oil;
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever.

Additional Thank You

In last week's Hearsay I forgot to include Chris Besenty in thanking folks for their help with the sound project at the Community Center.

Chris helped Don put up the wall anchors that hold the sound absorbent structure to the wall.

I'm pleased with the sound absorbent structure. It both softens the sound and softens the look of the big back wall at the Community Center. The Community Center seems sweeter, more inviting.

Thanks again to Don, Steve, Matt and Chris.

Everybody's Horoscope

This year puts you in touch with the simple pleasures that make you happy. You'll find yourself wanting fewer things, talking less and enjoying the spaces in your schedule. Others sense how centered you've become, and you'll be offered what seemed withheld from you before.

Happy New Year!

Without the singing
Where is the song?

We gather our wits and our bits of love,
And like bashful suitors in disheveled tuxedos,
Hair all awry, emotions turmoiling, flowers disarrayed
With a semi-crooked smile, tripping, limping, shuffling...
And THEN radiant and supernal, elevated, majestic
And deliciously enigmatic--- we begin to sing
And though it's the only song there is,
it always comes out differently like the Toucans of Panama,
Like Lemurs in Madagascar, like Duckbilled Platypuses
Swerving in distant Australian streams that flow
So sparse and so golden in that vast sunlight....

Counting curves on Highway 1

by David Mitchell, SparselySageAndTimely.com.

The State Highway Commission's engineering staff half a century ago proposed straightening Highway 1 between Olema and Highway 101 at Richardson Bay. For awhile, West Marin residents were divided over the proposal. Many residents worried that the character of West Marin would change if it were connected to East Marin and San Francisco by a high-speed highway. On the other hand, many members of the business community reasoned they would get more customers if West Marin were accessible to more people.

To demonstrate the need for a straighter and presumably safer highway, two men, Frank Myer and Lee Sefton, 52 years ago this January counted all the curves on Highway 1 between Point Reyes Station and Highway 101. As was reported at the time in The Baywood Press (the original name of The Point Reyes Light), there are 520 curves in that 30-mile stretch, and "33 of these are blind, sharp curves."

Here is the Highway 1 survey carried out by Myer and Sefton, whom the newspaper referred to as a "citizens curve-counting committee":

Point Reyes Station to Olema — 2 miles, 21 curves.
Olema to Bolinas — 10 miles, 115 curves. Bolinas to Stinson Beach — 5 miles, 81 curves. Stinson Beach to Muir Beach — 6 miles, 166 curves. Muir Beach to Tam Junction — 6 miles, 132 curves. Tam Junction to Highway 101 — 1 mile, 5 curves.

This abundance of curves prompted a sardonic comment from Baywood Press publisher Don DeWolfe: "Makes us wonder what the motive is behind opposition to the improvement of this wonderful road."

Despite its support from members of the business community, most West Marin residents — and finally the Marin County Board of Supervisors — came to oppose straightening Highway 1, and the state abandoned the proposal. In retrospect, most of us are glad it did.

It's open season on kale

Dear Editor,

Last week, the Light reported the good news that the Gulf of the Farallones and Cordell Bank national marine sanctuaries may be enlarged by as much as 2,771 square miles. The headline, "NOAA will expand marine sanctuaries," jumped the gun and was more a prediction than reporting. As the formal Federal Register notice explains, "no decision has been made yet regarding this possible action." But it's a pretty good bet that there will be expanded sanctuary boundaries at the end of the process in a year or two.

It might be good to clear up another item in the Light's story—the sentence that reads, "Restrictions on harvesting kale, brought by the Pacific Fishery Management Council, which works to protect marine species along the coast, also are imposed within the sanctuary." There are no legal restrictions on harvesting kale in the sanctuary. (But on the practical side, conditions for growing kale in the sanctuary are generally considered to be sub-optimal.)

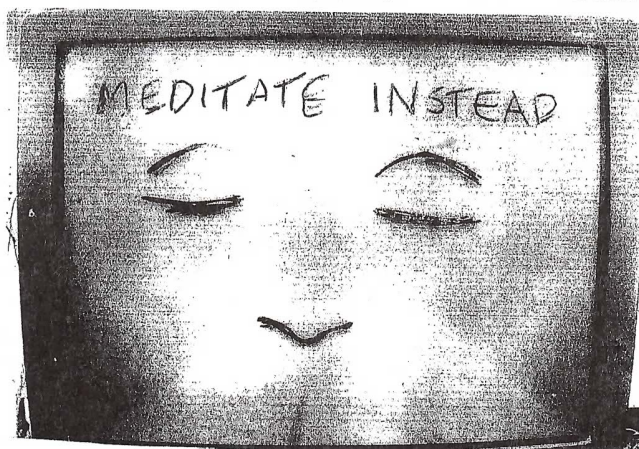

Seven years ago, the Pacific Fishery Management Council banned commercial krill fishing, which may be what the Light's reporter had in mind. That federal regulation, however, applies everywhere on the coast, whether inside or outside our federal marine sanctuaries. And in the case of krill, the feds were just playing catch-up with California. In 2000, California became the first jurisdiction in the United States to ban fishing for this important food for salmon, whales, seabirds and many other ocean creatures.

But it's always open season on kale.

JOHN MCCUTCHEON

The Washington Post described John as folk music's "Rustic Renaissance Man," a musician flawed only by its understatement. "Calling John McCutcheon a 'folksinger' is like saying Deion Sanders is just a football player..." (Dallas Morning News). Besides his usual circuit of major concert halls and theaters, John is equally at home in an elementary school auditorium, on a festival stage, or at a farm rally. He is a whirlwind of energy packing five lifetimes into one. His thirty recordings have garnered every imaginable honor including seven Grammy nominations. He has produced more than twenty albums of other artists, from traditional fiddlers to contemporary singer-songwriters to educational and documentary works.

Lunatic fringe dominating gun debate

By Steve Heilig

A lone gunman opened fire today in (San Francisco, Aurora, Columbine, Virginia Tech, Tucson ... Connecticut) and shot _____ innocent people, killing _____ people and wounding _____ more. Politicians offered sympathy, but no solutions. Survivors were left to grieve without hope of change that might prevent more such tragedies.

That's the sad scenario with each new mass shooting. But beyond the headlines lies an ongoing national epidemic of tragedy: Thirty people are murdered via guns on an average day. Accidental shootings claim many more. Inevitable — or preventable?

The answer depends on whom you ask. The American Academy of Pediatrics offers advice to parents who have guns such as "Keep your guns locked away, unloaded, warn your kids about them." But the National Rifle Association has attacked such guidelines as anti-American and a threat to gun rights. The gun lobby doesn't stop there. Florida passed a law that would have made it a crime for doctors to talk about guns with patients. Thankfully, this ridiculous law was overturned.

Here in San Francisco, the NRA challenged local ordinances that required guns be safely stored in homes, trigger locks and a ban on the possession of "particularly dangerous ammunition" with "no sporting purpose." A judge rejected this challenge, but the NRA has vowed to keep fighting what it construes as a "war" on gun ownership.

This seems a dominant mentality in the NRA, which favors discredited arguments about guns deterring crime. Its motto is no compromise; one of its board members has labeled federal firearms authorities "a jack-booted group of fascists." Even politicians known to favor more gun control are afraid to cross the gun lobby.

Perhaps this latest slaughter will embolden our president and other politicians. My late father, a lifelong hunter and gun owner, quit the NRA when he saw them become "the crazies." Majorities of gun owners favor better gun control policies such as mandated gun safety courses, background checks and waiting periods for gun purchases, and bans at places such as campuses — as well as assault-weapons bans. But until the fanatic, paranoid wing of the gun debate is marginalized, we are likely to be stuck with tragedies such as we have just seen.

Steve Heilig is a health policy consultant and educator for various organizations, co-editor of the Cambridge Quarterly of Healthcare Ethics, and, as a youth, a certified junior marksman.

Bolinas

I.

The open faced fishing boats
are surfing the slow motion silt wave of Bolinas Lagoon's suffocation
at the hands of the permanence of concrete that cured the 100 year spit.

We blame the gated community,
but we too have plugged
the escape valve with concrete.
The Little Mesa shoulda, woulda, coulda been a 100 year island.

We live on a waterfall of wetlands
dissolving at the licks
of mother ocean's joy and fury.

II.

The gulls can get away from the bustle
of the business center hive
infesting the land.
They kick it on their own private island by the breakers
and await the bath of the sunset.

While the tide pools crackle and pop,
the dry cliffs shed the summer's dead skin,
the invasive exotics ski into the sea like penguins.

That I can stand here
and watch the waterlines
play out in geologic time,
is hope enough for this moment.
