The New Digital Sound Board

Don Smith gave me a demo of the new Community Center soundboard and its awesome ability to sculpt the sound in the hall.

Thanks to Omar and Zoro for leading the effort to get the new board.

And thanks to Don Smith for all his contributions to the state of the sound in the Community Center. The bass traps that he made are a beautiful addition to the hall, and Don's devotion to tuning the Community Center is wonderful.

Thank you, Omar, Zoro, and Don, for making it more beautiful.

Co-working at the Commons

Intrigued by the concept of "co-working" this Hearsay reporter walked to the Bolinas Commons on Tuesday morning to check it out.

Fueled by a cup of Brazilian coffee, expertly concocted by Miguel, this reporter sat outside in the sun to read a fascinating tabloid by Charlie Callahan on art and starfish consciousness. (see ad for Batstar Press on page 3)

Shelby, the chief conspirator behind the co-working concept explained, "Basically we just hang out together and work on our individual projects."

Shelby said that working alone at home breeds a kind of isolation mentality which can become neurotic. Working together heals that wound (he added they have superfast internet)

Co-working at the Commons reminded me of the many times I have found a favorite cafe to hang out in, a place for philosophical reflection over a java buzz, a place of like minds.

Like minds, maybe that's what I like about Co-working at the Commons. Didn't actually do any work, but felt accomplished, and inspired, from having experienced Like Minds at the Commons.
