Trick or Treating in Bolinas

<https://findery.com/acaid/notes/one-of-the-most-vivid-memories-i-ha>

One of the most vivid memories I have of Halloween was walking down Brighton some hours after dusk as a small child. The streets were filled with swarms of children who'd made their way down from the dusty roads of the Big Mesa to milk downtown for all the candy they could carry. Teenagers clattered past on their skateboards throwing eggs and toilet paper. The streets were candlelit under the sickly glow of mercury vapor lamps and smelled of saltwater of sage. I remember watching shadows flicker across picket fences, old cars, and looming junipers, thinking to myself for the first time, that I enjoyed the night.

THANKSGIVING

For many years, Ilka Hartmann, has been the person who made our Community Thanksgiving Meal happen. This year she will be in the hospital having both hips replaced. The BCC hopes someone will come forward to take Ilka's place and organize this well loved and well attended event. We really want this event to happen again this year but need someone to come forward to take the reins. Call Lia or Randi at 868-2128 if you are able to help. Thanks, June McAdams

VOTE YES ON MEASURE E

It's Summer Camp . . . and more!

Bolinas-Stinson Summer Camp - 2012 season

Mesa Park provides the perfect "base camp" for the Bolinas-Stinson summer camp, offering a space for sports and activities such as games, art, and music. The summer fun is open to our local school population as well as children from the extended families of Bolinas residents.

Please help keep Mesa Park a place for such future activities. Vote YES on Measure E. For $49 per year (that's less than $1 a week) per improved parcel, we can continue to maintain the children's playground, softball diamond, soccer field, skatepark, and basketball court, as well as a venue for summer camp, birthday parties and other special events.

Funding from Measure E is only for maintenance of the property at 110 Mesa Road, by the Firehouse. The downtown park is privately funded, and any future swimming pool will be maintained by user fees.

DANCING TO OUR ANCESTORS

Swaha, a celebratory Odissi classical Indian dance performance in honor of Day of the Dead, by Barbara Framm and Nubia Teiveira, followed by 5RHYTHMS, a collection of songs by musicians who have passed and left their music as a gift for us, directed by Kathy Altman. A heart-felt celebration of the Day of the Dead! Traditionally celebrated in Mexico with joy, music, and dance, the Day of the Dead honors our ancestors and the dear ones that passed. The Dance Palace space will be graced by a traditional Day of the Dead altar. We invite you to bring a memento to the community altar. ### DAY OF THE DEAD

For more than 3,000 years, the indigenous people who lived in Mexico, the Southwest, and California, have celebrated a ritual honoring the dead. Over time, this ritual became known as El Dia de los Muertos, the Day of the Dead. It is a celebration of life and a time to share memories through arts and crafts, music, stories, and food. Join us in celebrating those who have gone before us. A communal altar will be constructed, so please bring photos, flowers, or mementos of a loved one. Aztec dancers will conclude the night's festivities. Event includes local Mexican Food.

"He who lieth down with dogs, shall rise up with fleas." - Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790)

Waging Heavy Peace
A Hippie Dream

By Neil Young
Illustrated. 497 pages.
Blue Rider Press. $30.

While He Can Still Remember

Not many authors explain their reasons for writing books as bluntly as Neil Young does in "Waging Heavy Peace." First of all there's the thing now known as the Keith Richards phenomenon:

JANET MASLIN

BOOKS OF THE TIMES

there turns out to be a large and lucrative market for memoirs from rock stars. In a two-page chapter called "Why This Book Exists" Mr. Young explains that his book will be a goose that lays a golden egg. He's writing it because it will earn him enough money to stay off the stage for a while, which he badly needs to do for mental and physical reasons. "It all started when I broke my toe at the pool," he explains.

The personal stories about Mr. Young's children and their mothers, about friends and band mates lost to ill health and drugs, can be as eerie as any of Mr. King's daydreams. But "Waging Heavy Peace" has an affirmative spirit that is one of its most poignant qualities. The particular challenges that have faced Mr. Young and his wife, Pegi, in raising the son they call Ben Young, "our spastic, quadriplegic, non-verbal spiritual leader," are discussed openly but without pathos. For example, the fact that Ben can now take nutrition only through a feeding tube is mentioned as a reason he will have to cut back on paddleboarding.

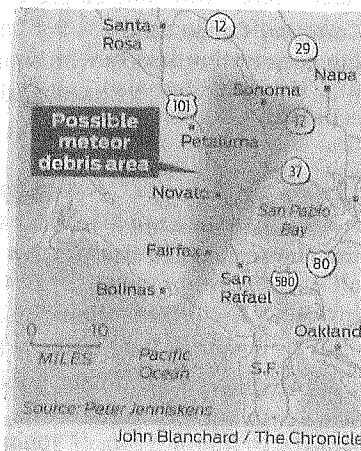

Mr. Young has faced so many serious health crises of his own — polio, epilepsy, surgery for a brain aneurysm that prompted him to quickly record one of his most haunting albums, "Prairie Wind," knowing that it might be his last — that he has learned not to accentuate the negative. But as for mistakes he has made, he treats "Waging Heavy Peace" as a chance to acknowledge them. The book expresses great love for Zeke, the oldest of this three children, while acknowledging that Mr. Young fell in love with Zeke's mother, the actress Carrie Snodgrass, when he saw her picture in a magazine. In hindsight he sees that romance — even though it had a lot to do with the beautiful "Harvest" — as a short-lived and sad chapter.

Susan Acevedo, the first of his two wives, sewed fashion-forward hippie patches onto the pair of his jeans seen on the back cover of "After the Gold Rush," using her hair as thread. One day he came home to find that Ms. Snodgrass had taken the patchwork apart.

There are angry things that might be said about this episode. But Mr. Young keeps it Delphic, as he always has: "That was pretty numbing. I am not sure I am over that. Clothes make the man."

"Mom says it's safer."

Behind the Sun: The Bolinas diaries

Jim Carroll tries to avoid drugs by, er...moving to 1970s Bolinas?

by Jason Walsh

30 years ago

From the Sun vaults, March 21 - 27, 1980

'When it rains it smells like coughdrops'—Jim Carroll, on Bolinas, in his book Forced Entries

A heroin-addicted rent boy was steering clear of his oddball Bolinas neighbors 30 years ago this week.

Poet Jim Carroll had left his New York street-hustling days far behind when he packed up a piddling literary grant and ran to the eccentric coastal Marin town to try and kick his smack habit once and for all in the spring of 1974.

By 1980, when the Pacific Sun caught up with him for the story "Trying to Survive the Asphalt Jungle," Carroll was the toast of the underground literary scene and his band had just released one of the most acclaimed albums of the punk-rock era.

The one-time school-age hoops star was "nuthin' but net" once again thanks to finding his muse in Marin.

"Kids have all sorts of kid problems, kid adventures and kid fantasies," wrote Sun reporter Rex Fink, after reading The Basketball Diaries. "So what? They bore me. But along comes Jim Carroll's jazzed up autobiographical account of his life as a 13-year-old in New York City. Take it from me, it ain't boring."

Originally published in 1978 by Michael Wolfe's Tombouctou press in Bolinas, The Basketball Diaries had the national press throbbing over its terse chronicle of jump shots, heroin shots and the man-boy street hustlers of Manhattan. Its brutal prose—"stoned in nods of black pools with strange insects buzzing"; "all those faces staring at my body f---ing a mouth on its knees"—was like needle pricks in the limp-armed facade of Fonzi-decade malaise.

But if Carroll truly had the "best street rap East of Zappa," as the Sun proclaimed, echoing the sentiments of Rolling Stone magazine, one wouldn't have guessed from his quiet existence in Bolinas, Marin's infamous getaway enclave for artists, outlaws and the antisocial avant-garde.

"Jim Carroll didn't mellow into Marin County hot-tub consciousness," wrote biographer John Milward. "He tended a garden, read and wrote through the day, took long walks with the dogs, and settled down in the evening to three successive newscasts, an occasional chicken TV dinner, a joint, and prime-time television."

Though still in his mid-20s when he arrived in Marin, years of gutter heroin had taken their toll on the lanky writer. Carroll came to defuse his blood of 53rd Street white heat and replace it with daily methadone shakes from a small detox in San Rafael. "I need this place, this small town," he said of Bolinas.

The poet lived in a tiny farmhouse on Mesa Road where he was rarely seen without his faithful cur confidant Jo'mama. Bolinas was known for its raucous weekend nightlife—a mix of hippie poets, renegade easy riders and counterculture clowns—but Carroll shied away from the rough crowds lining Smiley's. His favored—and infrequent—forays, according to his Mesa Road roommate Mary Greer, were quiet poetry readings or face-in-the-crowd day trips to the Renaissance Faire in Novato.

"I'm ready for some precise boredom to wash over me, instigating a life where the choices are mine," he said about the anonymity of Marin. "I want to write in a room where the view doesn't change from day to day."

And write he did. While the views from Mesa Road stoically held up their end of the bargain, Carroll culled the journals he'd kept from his days turning tricks for tecata and bared his soul in a prose the Sun described as "purple and black" in a memoir it deemed "poetic beauty."

It took a second printing of Basketball Diaries for the mainstream lit world to agree, but by 1980 Jim Carroll was being featured in national magazines like Newsweek and Rolling Stone. At the urging of friend Patti Smith, Carroll then teamed with a Bolinas bar band called Amsterdam and together, as the Jim Carroll Band, they debuted with the album Catholic Boy in 1980; its most famous song, "People Who Died," was a laundry list of boomer-generation demise—from heroin and suicide to Vietnam and murder. Carroll was suddenly an art-scene celeb; he hung out with Keith Richards, he worked with Andy Warhol. With the low whisper of black tar once again in his ear, Carroll returned to New York. A pair of disappointing follow-up albums found him out of a record contract by the mid-'80s; his writing was limited to a Basketball Diaries sequel and poetry compilations. Out of the public eye for years, the hermitic poet found himself on the defense in 1999 when The Basketball Diaries was charged with inspiring the massacre at Columbine.

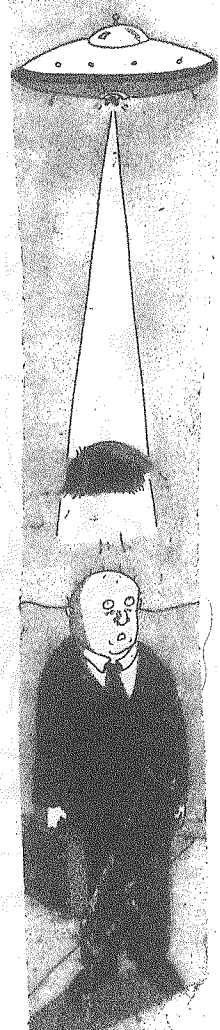

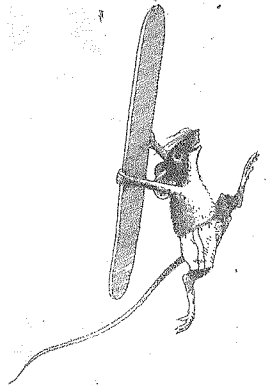

His frail frame and quivering voice spurred endless rumors that he was back on the needle. "With the dream in front of me again I found that it was quite easy to curse," he wrote about his addiction, "but so much harder to refuse."

Jim Carroll died in Manhattan last year at age 61. He was found alone, sitting at his writing desk.

HOW TO PLACE AN AD IN THE HEARSAY

Come to the office at 270 Elm at Maple behind the BPUD office on a Monday, Wednesday or Friday morning 9-11am. Your ad will appear the same day! Ad forms are also available in the small mailbox next to the Hearsay Door. Fill out the form, enclose payment (please indicate you have enclosed payment in case they become separated) & drop in door slot.
