YOUR HEARSAY NEWS IN THE RED

Unless you are among the estimated 8% of people who are color-blind, you may have noticed that today's paper is printed entirely in red. Unfortunately, this is not one of our bold artistic gestures, but rather because the black ink pump on our printing press has broken.

Replacement parts for this particular machine are pricey and hard to come by, so please consider making a donation of any amount, to help us get back in black.

If your love of the Hearsay compels you, you could drop some cash by our office at 270 Elm Road, or send a check to Hearsay News, PO BOX 327, BOLINAS 94924

Thank you for your ongoing support of the Bolinas Hearsay News.

I was privileged to attend some of the morning session before I had to leave for my health care work in Sonoma. I left with my mind opened in a way I'd never had imagined. As a mind/body practitioner of very many years I hadn't noticed I still kept attitudes about emotions, the mind and the clinical facts of health conditions in cloistered areas as if the convenience of those separations needed to remain an essential commitment. I'm not sure I can change that habit/reflex but I'm grateful for the efforts of the larger Commonweal community purpose and practice giving me the chance.

Bolinas artist circles themes of destruction in new publication

By Silas Valentino

"Hello 2018—let's find the starfish in our brains." So begins Bolinas artist, musician and woodworker Charlie Callahan's new publication, "See Life," and for the next several thousand words, readers are brought into the author's swirling manifesto. Locals may know him as a drummer in various bands or through his exhibit at the Bolinas Museum in 2015, which featured glowing blue sea urchins emerging from the wall and scavenged items he used to express dark ideas about ecological turmoil. He's also an avid surfer and splits his time between sea and land. "See Life" both warns of a imperiled planet and serves as a catalog of his artwork. His abstract and tangential prose explores topics ranging from how human beings have destroyed the earth in just a couple of centuries to his social observations from a vantage point between real and metaphysical worlds. "I've never been diagnosed with attention deficient disorder, but my thoughts skip from one to another without filling in the blanks. I'll write in the same way; another balloon lights up and I go there," Mr. Callahan said. Three local editor friends—Ashley Eva Brock, Katie Eberle and Nicole Lavelle—cast an eye on his 9,000-word essay before it went to print. "I love Charlie's brain, and in the editing process I was trying not to curb or tame it down," Ms. Brock said. "I tried to make it more cohesive for people so they wouldn't get lost and put it down." Religious iconography and references appear throughout the publication (the cover depicts a starfish crucified to a cross). For Mr. Callahan, who grew up near the Bible Belt in Ohio, the way humans are destroying the earth is comparable to the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. "I was thinking back to my childhood and how I was being obedient to a religious doctrine," he mused. "Coming from a quote-unquote Red State, there are really strong opinions on both sides. I was trying to challenge all of that from a more philosophical point of view. And people get more fired up about things when you use religious icons." Ms. Brock, a clothing designer who shares her studio with Mr. Callahan, said "See Life" also can be interpreted as commentary on sea star wasting disease, which has ravaged populations of starfish and is linked to rising ocean temperatures. "They're dying for our sins," she said. Copies of "See Life" are available through Mr. Callahan, who can be reached at frozinlava@gmail.com.

Valentine's Day Poem: Two-Top Lovers: Pts. I-II
It's Back! A Service Monkey's Greatest Nightmare.
Valentine's Day! Every Service Monkey knows Mother's Day is by far the worst, but that Valentine's Day is clearly second, worse than New Years' Eve, St. Patrick's Day, or Cinco de Mayo.

Two-Top Lovers: Pts. I-II

Two-Top Lovers: Pt. II
 St. Valentine's Day Massacre
 The Village Elliott: 1/15

Saint Day of Valentine,
 The one day of the year
 Just two-top lovers dine,
 Wise Service Monkeys fear,
 New hopefuls, love-starved, share
 Wrong entree, overcooked,
 There linger, know, don't care,
 Their table's over-booked.

Self-centered, thoughtless man,
 Makes promises to you,
 Imposing star-crossed plan,
 Demands all present view,
 Rejected! All can see
 She's burned-out on his trip.
 Dejected, tries to flee,
 Caught; pays tab, not due tip.

Two languid lovers laugh,
 Mock dining protocol,
 They jerk around the staff,
 And dominate the hall.
 Then better half does swoon,
 Faints! Face plants in date's plate
 Gallant, with greasy spoon
 He tries to extricate.

Say, what's that pungent smell?
 It permeates the room,
 Did she succumb to spell,
 Bewitched by own perfume,
 Big Pharma's masking spray,
 "Eau de Pepe Lepew?"
 No, heard her server say,
 "Still served on our menu."

The next year: It's back again!

Two-Top Lovers: Pt II
 St. Valentine's Day Re-Massacred

Re-Mix of Last Year's:
 "Two-Top Lovers"
 The Village Elliott: 2/16

Great! Day of Valentine,
 Next worst of Servers' Year;
 Day Mothers Brood doth dine,
 Worst Day that they all fear,
 Less hopeful love-scarred pair;
 Same table, once more booked,
 Still clueless, have no prayer;
 Their love's lost, over, cooked,

Recall cheap, clueless man?
 He's back! New date to woo;
 Demands you help, smae plan;
 Forgets tip still owes you;
 Expecting she to flee,
 Suspect he'll try to skip;
 Collect upfront both the
 Old dues, preemptive tip.

Same languid lovers laugh,
 Sloshed too much alcohol,
 Again jerk service staff,
 This year he's first to fall;
 Then Better Half doth swoon,
 Knocks over every plate;
 Galoot grabs greasy spoon,
 Eats food off fallen date...

Another pungent smell
 Now permeates the room;
 When their leftovers fell,
 Mess mixed new, strange perfume
 Meal done, both crawl away,
 Like Service Monkey crew
 With work done; Time to play!
 Sloshed, crawl off two-by-two.

Feigning a seizure will stop the ceremony.
