"Home Run on Love Field"

by StuArt

Does spending ten hours on a baseball field stranded between first and second base sound like fun?

It was fun (and also work) at the Far West Fest on Love Field in Pt. Reyes on Saturday.

The Far West Fest is an annual fund-raiser for KWMR, our beloved local radio. I've been taking the fortune wheel to the festival since it started. There's a carnival atmosphere at the festival, and the Wheel of Life fits right in.

It was sunny in Pt. Reyes and I anticipated a blistering time on Love Field. But a cool breeze kept it pleasantly warm throughout the day.

I had a bunch of new fortunes for the wheel. I've been writing fortunes for the wheel for 20 years, and I've gotten pretty good, but I'm always learning.

One guy spun the wheel. His fortune read "Ask Your Mom." Previously I had thought that "Ask Your Mom" was a pretty good fortune.

But his face fell and he muttered, "No way . . . my mom's dead."

There was a moment of profound silence as the Angel of Death fluttered above us.

I felt his loss and paused for a moment. Then I responded with a smile, "Well in that case - spin again!"

He spun again, and damn if the wheel didn't stop right on "Reaper" the grim symbol of death. I hesitated for a moment and then handed the guy what he'd reaped.

His eyes were wet with tears as he looked up from the fortune. "Believe and It Shall Be." he sniffed, "That's what my mom always said."

It was an amazing coincidence that left me speechless. What are the chances of that happening? But it was one amazing coincidence among many. The synchronicity was flowing at the Far West Fest.

I began to wonder if there was some higher intelligence directing the spins as people read and reacted to their fortunes,

Bridget from Bolinas stopped by to spin the wheel. She was radiant and stoked from having gone surfing 565 days in a row.

She spun and the wheel stopped right between "Love" and "Marriage." I saw a look of recognition and resignation flash across her face as she pondered the traditional lifestyle of love and marriage.

"Oh my gosh." she blushed. "What could that mean?" I handed her the fortune. She laughed and shouted "Yes!" as she read it. "Good Waves"

How appropriate, I thought. Good waves is love and marriage for Bridget.

Once again, I wondered about the significance of the coincidence. What were the odds? I distinctly felt that there was some kind of playful intelligence speaking through the wheel.

Steve Kinsey dropped by. I congratulated him on his re-election. He spun the wheel and landed on "Work." We both laughed knowingly as I handed him his fortune.

"Imagine" it read.

Wow, I thought, what a perfect fortune for Steve. Of all the fortunes I wrote, he got the perfect one. What are the odds of that?

At the end of the day I was packing up the fortune wheel and a fortune fell off and landed at my feet. Must be for me, I thought. I bent down and picked it up.

CALLIN OUT AROUND OUR WORLD, ARE YOU READY TO CLEAN UP OUR BEACH
SUMMER'S HERE AND THE TIME IS RIGHT FOR SPRUCING UP OUR BEACH
WE'RE DANCING IN BOLINAS, CLEANING UP THE BEACH....

ALL WE NEED IS MONEY, SWEET SWEET MONEY,
THERE'LL BE SWINGING SWAYING AND TRASH AWAYING
AND CLEANING UP THE BEACH

IT DOESN'T MATTER WHAT YOU GIVE, JUST AS LONG AS YOU DO CARE
SO COME ON EVERY GUY AND EVERY GAL EVERYONE AND CLEAN OUR WORLD
THERE'LL BE CLEANING, CLEANING UP THE BEACH.

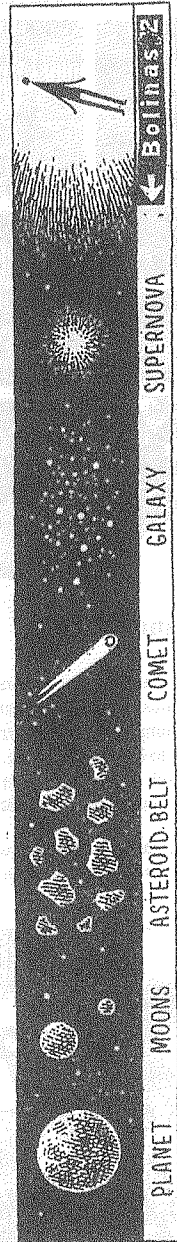

By now you have hopefully received our letter requesting donations for the Village & Beach Clean Up program. We are so lucky to live at the beach and be able to share with our fellow life traveler's- but life can be messy. The beaches and our historic downtown are so unique and their condition reflects our commitment to keeping our village and beaches clean, safe and as beautiful as possible.

The Bolinas Community Center spends approximately $7,000 an year to clean the beach entrances, the beach and downtown too. The Bolinas Community Center receives a $2,500 grant from Marin County yearly towards our village and beach clean-up expenses but the balance comes from the center's general fund and you. Last year the center received over $4,000 from you. THANK YOU.

We again ask for your kind and generous assistance so please return the form with your donation in the envelope provided. If you would rather stop by the center's office please do, we would love to see you. We are in the office M-F for sure from 11-1 and often longer so come on by.

All donations are tax deductible and truly appreciated by all of us at the Bolinas Community Center.

My Eye on the 70's, the music, the people and more

<http://barryschneierphotography.wordpress.com/>

Travel north of San Francisco, about 30 miles along Highway One, and somewhere just north of Stinson Beach, a left turn takes you there. Don't look for a sign. It will never be there. The yearly tradition of the Highway Department to place a directional sign, "Bolinas 2 miles", is followed by another tradition, the residents removal of the sign. A small hamlet of a town, it's residents comprise of artists, writers, musicians, seekers of spiritual paths and farmers. I discovered the town purely by accident. Having just moved to California i decided to live by the ocean. Responding to an ad for a rental, landed me there and my west coast journey began. It's a place to I hold dear to my heart and travel back whenever I am in the area. Even if just for an afternoon to walk along Agate Beach or have a beer at Smileys. My last vist being April of this year, and I am happy to report that as of that day, much still remains the same.

Every Fourth of July was celebrated by at parade downtown. A true spectacle, the town would honor our nation's independence by exhibiting it's own testimony to individual freedom. It didn't matter who you were or where you came from. On this day all were invited and all were welcome.

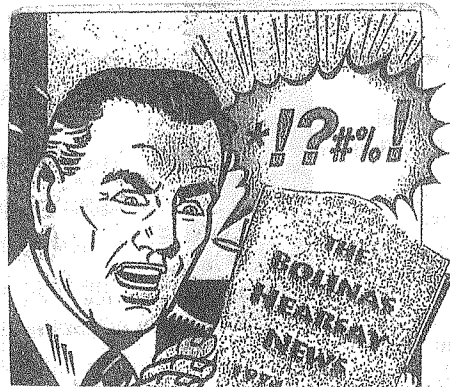

BOLINAS: At 8:16 a.m. someone reported that people were illegally harvesting eel and shells from Duxbury Reef. Deputies were unaware of any prohibitions against doing so.

BOLINAS: At 11:51 p.m. someone heard an explosion.

Heard It at the Hardware

By Robin Bradford

GOSSIP. "If there is anything more annoying in the world than having people talk about you, it is certainly having people not talk about you." ~ Oscar Wilde

Bumping into people one knows and likes is just one of the benefits of small town living. I'm sure everyone doesn't find it amusing to hear stories about oneself, but personally, I'm from the Oscar Wilde School. One day, my husband was helping a customer who began disparaging the attributes of a certain someone. One must assume the talkative fellow didn't realize the person he was talking about was the very person he was talking to. Yesterday, the tables were turned somewhat when a nice lady purchased a copy of Lloyd Kahn's wonderful book "Tiny Homes." To get at her wallet, she put the magazine she was carrying, Ode, on the counter. "Oh," said my husband. "The founders of that magazine were almost out of business but decided to keep going with it, and they saved it!" She responded, "I know. I'm one of the founders." (She also mentioned they are changing the name of the publication to Optimist.) At a recent dinner party in Stinson Beach, the hardware store was a topic, according to a friend who attended. "Yeah, it's for sale," confided the Person-in-the-Know. "They only have a two-year lease and they're trying to sell it while there's still time." This is news to me and my partners, as we couldn't be happier with the business. A month ago, we celebrated our first year in operation, immensely grateful for the amazing community support we've received. Thank you all for buying local and keeping West Marin businesses thriving! And that's not gossip.

CATALOGUE JUNKIE. A young visitor from out-of-state has been hanging around the store lately. We have become a regular stop along his daily trek and he loves nothing better than to borrow one of many 1,200 page catalogues we have on file to pore through page after boring page. His favorite is the Grainger catalogue and he recently pointed out his favorite item: a $12,000 Margarita Slushy machine, which he strongly recommended we buy immediately. "Margaritas would go very well with popcorn." Recently, I suggested he might enjoy reading a dictionary. That idea got a lukewarm reception, probably similar to my reaction to the idea of a Margarita Slushy machine.

COVER GIRL. The cover of this month's House Beautiful features the newly remodeled Bolinas residence of Mark and Kim Dempster. A glorious Louise Nevelson-inspired fireplace surround was not only the brainchild of architect Alethea Patton, but the girl can build, as well! Taking wood scraps from the project, as well as pieces out of her own stash, Alethea composed a unique and beach-appropriate surround that is a piece of art. Painted all white in classic Nevelson style, it's a brilliant use of recycled materials and will surely be enjoyed by the owners for many years.

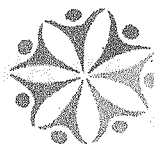

REALLY? A well-dressed lady pulled into our parking lot in her expensive car and came in to return a six-cent washer. We gladly accept returns but the cost of gas, even if she came from a block away, would greatly outweigh the six cents. This definitely goes in my Doesn't Compute file.

SILVER POLISH, IOWA STYLE. After watching me struggle to polish a small, elaborate silver bowl, Terry Bell told me about his mom's home remedy for sparkling silver: a pot of warm water, left on the stove with just a trickle of flame to keep it warm, a scant handful of salt, a piece of tin foil, and a quarter cup of powdered fabric softener. Mrs. Bell dipped her silver in the potion for a few seconds for a no-fail, elbow grease-free remedy. As soon as I can lay my hands on powdered fabric softener, I plan to brew up a batch for an at-home test and report the results. Here's to better living with as few chemicals as possible...

PUT A BIRD ON IT. Our trees are flush with fruit. This morning, there was a regular bird convention fluttering about -- robins, hummingbirds, crows, quail, and a couple of interlopers whose identity remains a mystery. I made a big batch of Bolinas Backyard Plum Jam. As for the rest of the fruit at the tops of the trees, I'm leaving it to my feathered friends. I can't reach it anyway.

POT LUCK. Anna Gade hosted a Gibraltar-themed dinner the other night for her Ulysses reading group to screen the 1968 black and white film of the same name for twenty or so dedicated Joyce-ophiles. About ten minutes in, my head spinning as if in a cotton candy machine, I kept wishing I had read the book more recently than several decades ago. The film was part Dali, part Fellini, part James Joyce, part bad student film -- and I sank into my comfortable chair feeling grossly unintellectual. But then in the final twenty minutes, a divine intensity pulled it all together, as Molly Bloom rises from her bed and thunders onscreen in all her voluptuous glory. That night, I had the most vivid of dreams and I'm convinced I could actually explain the meaning of Joyce's masterpiece, if only I could remember the dream.

CUTE LITTLE KIDS. An outright joy of being at the hardware store is the constant stream of darling children who come in. I shamelessly eavesdrop on their conversations as they attempt to persuade their parents to buy them something they've "always wanted," usually a toy, but sometimes the items are more, well...sophisticated. One little boy loves vacuum cleaners and runs to the shed where we keep ours stashed. We let him turn it on but he's still too short to push it. Another kid wants a ball-peen hammer in the worst way, but he calls it a Pee-Ball Hammer. And one little red-headed girl "collects" paint chips. Her mother has limited additions to her expanding collection to no more than two cards per visit. Some kids end up talking themselves out of buying something as in today's incident over a wind-up monkey -- "Mommy, pweeeze get 'dis for me cuz' I forgottted my wall-wet. Ohhhh, 'das okay, I tink I might get it lay-der..."

Buzzard Poetry: An All-Star Tribute to Poetic Icon Lew Welch

Posted: 07/20/2012 2:58 pm http://www.huffingtonpost.com/steve-hellig/lew-welch-poetry_b_1677932.html

Lew Welch

Poet Lew Welch wandered off into the Sierra Nevada mountains back in 1971, leaving a brief note, a few books of poetry and other writings, and many friends and fans. No word has been heard from him since, and very little more of his words were published after his disappearance. And that would be that, except...

On a recent evening, hundreds of people gathered at the San Francisco public library to honor Welch and to celebrate the publication of by the fabled City Lights bookshop and publishers of Ring of Bone, an updated selection of Welch's writings. His good friend, the equally fabled poet Gary Snyder, put the event together and welcomed the packed crowd by saying, "I keep looking around to see if there is anybody who looks like Lew here!" Snyder was alluding to Welch's disappearance and to what has been called the cult of the turkey buzzard, for in one of Welch's final and most famous poems, "Song of the Turkey Buzzard," he gave instructions for what he wished done with his body after death: a "sky burial," long practiced in some parts of the planet such as Tibet, wherein carnivore birds are encouraged to ingest one's flesh and fly away with it. Coincidentally or otherwise, the Wall Street Journal that week published Nature's Undertaker, a review of a Life Everlasting, a new book on the practice by the great naturalist Bernd Heinrich.

One of Welch's poetic gifts was to keep the prospect of even his own sky burial from seeming morbid -- in fact, he rendered it almost glorious, and engendered, since he was never found, what has been called "The cult of the turkey buzzard." Thus Snyder's half-joking comment about looking for Welch even now, and thus for years, decades even, friends and admirers of Welch would say, "Hey, Lew!" when a buzzard was spotted.

The new book, an expanded version of the original collection first published by pioneering editor Donald Allen, is highly recommended. Welch's poetry is some of the most "user-friendly" to be found, without sacrificing depth and mystique. Snyder recalled him as a "bright-eyed bardic spirit," and recalled hiking up on Mount Tamalpais and dropping LSD in attempt to cure Welch of the alcoholism that bedeviled him to his presumed death. "People did things like that back then," Snyder said with a chuckle. "It didn't work for Lew -- but I never smoked another cigarette."

Welch's friend and renowned poet, Joanne Kyger, also recalled his magnetic personality and remembered him saying, as lament or not, that "It looks like I am fated to be one to whom 'interesting' things happen -- perhaps aware even then of the Chinese curse "May you live in interesting times." Another veteran poet, David Meltzer, fondly recalled Welch as "a great tormented mentor"; actor Peter Coyote remembered Welch as a great entertainer onstage or off and as "the first proto-Buddhist I ever met." Huey Lewis -- yes, the rocker, who was sort of a son-in-law of Welch -- soulfully sang one of Welch's poems, and his friend Steve Sanfield, one of the last to see Welch alive, read a poem as if speaking to Welch himself, concluding "All day long we looked for you... I looked for your great wheeling bird; there were only the clouds."

Through the evening, renowned artist Tom Killion's vivid and bright images of Marin and the Sierras played in a perfectly-matched slideshow behind the speakers -- Killion and Snyder have done superb books together on those

He's been called a beat poet -- he co-authored a book of road trip haiku with Jack Kerouac, for one thing -- a nature poet, a Rabelaisian proto-Buddhist writer, a scholar of Gertrude Stein, a teacher of writing, a rousing stage performer, all of these or other things; but it is best to read his work, which is still alive whether he is or not, and in fact most of it is full of lust for life, humor, struggle, even... wisdom. There is certainly something of real lasting worth there, for how many writers, missing for 41 years, would have so many people, including many not yet born when he vanished, gather in such a heartfelt memorial? As Snyder concluded the tribute reading, "His mind is traveling right along amongst us all."

The final section of Welch's buzzard poem is here. To close the tribute event, Snyder returned to the stage to read it, slowly, the rapt crowd completely silent as he intoned:

Praises Gentle Tamalpais

Perfect in Wisdom and Beauty of the sweetest water and the soaring birds

great seas at the feet of thy cliffs

Hear my last Will & Testament:

"He who lies down with dogs, shall rise up with flies."
-Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790)

(Poem layout/spacing not correct; could not get "HuffPo" to get layout right. Apologies to the poet)

All care must be taken not to frighten the natives of this barbarous land, who will not let us die, even, as we wish.

With proper ceremony disembowel what I no longer need, that it might more quickly rot and tempt my new form

NOT THE BRONZE CASKET BUT THE BRAZEN WING
SOARING FOREVER ABOVE THEE O PERFECT
O SWEETEST WATER O GLORIOUS WHEELING

Among my friends there shall always be one with proper instructions for my continuance.

Let no one grieve. I shall have used it all up used up every bit of it.

What an extravagance! What a relief!

On a marked rock, following his orders, place my meat.
