Memorial Service for Ward

Please join us in celebrating the life of Ward. The potluck memorial service will be held on, Sunday July 31st from 1pm-4pm at the Bolinas Children's Center Garden.

Feel free to contribute food, cards, flowers, and pictures. There will be an album for pictures and messages, which the children are welcome to leave a message or drawing in, to be shared with the family.

A community circle will be included in the service for those who would like to say a few words or stories. We will also be holding a tree planting ceremony with seeds for the kids.

In tribute to Ward, we would like to ask that those willing and able (kids included) join us on a bike ride after the ceremony from the Children's Center parking lot down Elm Rd. to the top of Overlook Rd. where we will stop for a moment to look out over the ocean.

For those who would like to bring food to the family in the upcoming weeks, there is a meal train set up at <https://mealtrain.com/151n0z>.

Contact Nicole Amanson at 868-9489 with any further questions.

In honor of Ward, we will also be placing a handmade bench built by Chuck Oakander in the garden. Any donations for the bench would be appreciated. A box will be placed at the service for contributions.

Creative and Narrative Non-Fiction Writing Group Thurs, July 28, 6:30-8:30 at the Bolinas Commons

Free, any donations go directly to Bolinas Commons

Looking to grow, learn from others, get inspired, and find some accountability with your writing? Bring your personal essay, memoir, biography, and any other form of non-fiction you may be working on for some group feedback.

First hour will be spent writing, the second each person will read 5-10 minutes out loud for constructive critique and response. (optional, of course!) Any questions, feel free to contact Adele Barbato at adele.barbato@gmail.com or 860-534-0419.

Explorations in Jazz

This week we'll delve into Thelonious Monk, the man and his music, by watching Clint Eastwood's excellent documentary all about him, entitled

"Straight, No Chaser."

It's about 90 minutes long, which will leave time for some conversation afterwards.

After watching the film you still won't be sure why he paces and spins while waiting in the bus station or airport, but you'll get a very solid impression of his unique personality, angular piano styling, and immortal compositions.

FAREWELL, WARD

I'll miss that kind and funny fellow. For about 15 years now I'd make a point of seeing him any time I worked on a Hearsay, as our 'offices' were in the same building. He always had a smile and something funny to say. The last time, just a week or so ago, he said "Keep up the funny stuff!", referring to the paper, I assumed. "But what if it's all unintentionally funny?" I replied. "That makes it even funnier!" he shot back.

Truly a bright presence. And all those young kids he was with seemed to be (almost) always smiling with him too. That says a lot. R.I.P.

Rest In Peace - Peter Alston Evans

Born Oct 4, 1929, in Ross Hospital.

*When playing hide and seek the thing you said was:
"All the, all the Alstons free."*

Peter died at home in Berkeley, July 17th, 2016, after 86 wonderful years, sat upon by Priscilla, the dog, and in the company of his wife, Cricket, and his fine sons, Geoff and Hugh.

He grew up spending summers in Bolinas, playing on the beach, diving deep to avoid the anchor chain of his little boat or the boat itself, when he capsized in the surf. Boats and the ocean became part of his life ever since.

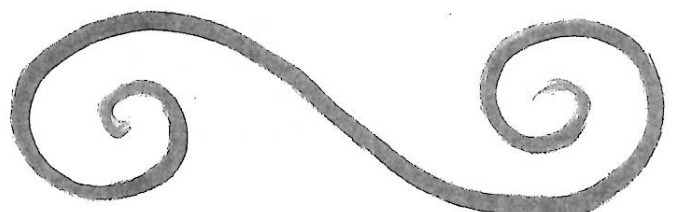

The family came to the Little Mesa about 1900, when his grandfather bought Sherman Smith's house. At the end of 1967 Peter and Cricket bought the old barn on the Little Mesa and the family moved here the following summer.

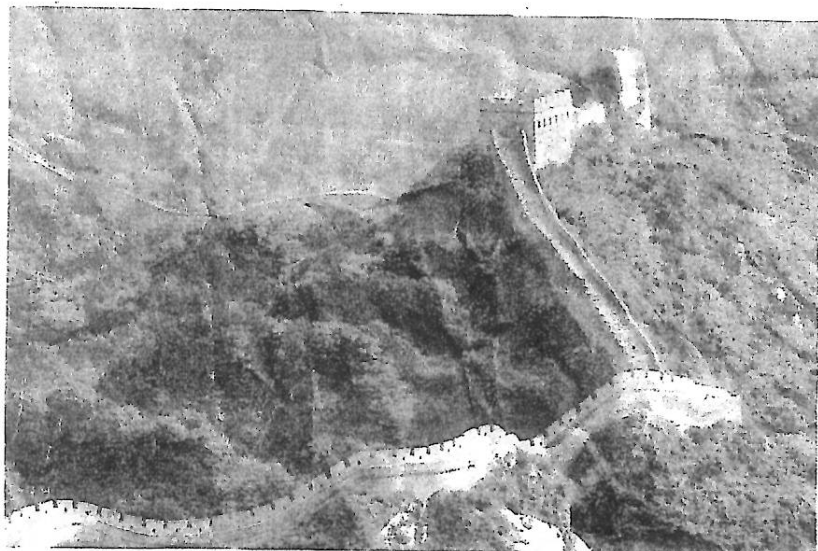

Peter commuted to San Francisco for his job for a number of years. Once, he dragged an old rowboat up to the barn, repaired the bottom, and rowed it to the City. Eventually he had a dory built by Bill Grunwald, which he rowed for forty years, out through the surf and down the coast, down rivers in California, and in the San Juans and the Gulf Islands of Canada, often camping in the boat with Cricket and the dog on the longer trips.

A few days before he died he had a vivid waking dream. He said the tides were going to be perfect on the 14th, and that we could catch the early morning ebb from Alameda and row to the City before the wind came up.

Memorials to the Bolinas Health Clinic could be made in Peter's name

Hey everyone...

I'm sorry to hear about the fire that's happening in Big Sur right now. My thoughts are with our families and friends who are living down there. Due to these unfortunate circumstances, a music festival that was slated to take place at the Loma Vista Gardens this week has been moved to Love Field in Point Reyes. This means that some truly world class musicians will be coming to West Marin. The lineup includes Michael Hurley, Jonathan Richman, Woods, Steve Gunn, Jessica Pratt, Little Wings, Kevin Morby, and more! I'll be playing some songs of my own, backed up by local shredders Jeff Manson, Ayal Lutwak and Danny Vitali. If you have the time this week, come hear some beautiful music!

Living in reactionary times

Commentary

By Elizabeth Whitney

We are living in reactionary times and it's not going to get easier. This is a cycle we have to live through, as horribly as it manifests. We can't prevent it and we can't control it—not you and I in our small personal worlds. The events of our times reverberate like a volcanic explosion of suppressed heat or an avalanche of latent energy responding to the tipping point of the last snowflake. The uprisings of our political news have not come out of nowhere to go nowhere.

Every disruption has an internal integrity. We can choose to identify with the elements of chaos or with the process by which chaos re-orders the foundations of reality. We each have our own way of seeing and participating in these disruptions, which sometimes seem personal and sometimes very impersonal. That's where we have control. To enter the fray or not enter the fray—that is our choice.

The world of cell phone cameras now shows us upsetting events as they happen, followed by almost immediate reaction to those outrages. The speeding up of time conditioned by the electronic age does not give much opportunity for reflection. Action insists on reaction. Emotions are fast and furious—and the trauma is intensified. Post-traumatic stress is becoming the new norm. This does not bode well.

The tyranny of war and injustice and brutality has been the conditioned reality of this planet for thousands of years. As without, so within. Our oppressed psyches are volcanoes and avalanches-in-waiting. We sense the depths of the imbalance of our world and we are hungry for transformation. The question is, what kind of food will satisfy the hunger?

It comes down to all the familiar existential questions of ordinary times, questions that are addressed in teachings that are ancient and universal. The true story of who we are and how this all came to pass has been hidden from us by our oppressors, but great spiritual teachers have consistently revealed pathways through this veil of obfuscation. The laws of man cannot override the universal laws of love. One of those is that truth is ever-present. Ask and it shall be revealed. In a state of humility, a sincere question will receive an answer.

Finding an inner place of composure is how to survive in reactionary times. That's the place of soul nourishment that puts us in tune with time, which is where synchronicity takes place. We control that. We control being where we are meant to be and who we are meant to meet and what opportunities we can work with for the transformation we desire. In the right environment, emotions find their proper role, which are to guide us to compassion and connection with others, no matter how they behave. It's what people mean by "leading from the heart."

Reactionary times can be uplifting and heartfelt times. The choice is ours.
