Ode to a beautiful night
by Herman Berlandt

On just such a night/ I wouldn't mind dying
Better yet/ Let me have three of these cozy, granny nights
Hushed warm and quiet/ One for the coroner's confirmation
One for the laying out in my well-worn corduroys
And one with zephyrs and birdsong/ for the lyrical funeral
Beneath the tree, amid the stars/ All all my loving friends
Modulating from Death/ To thoughts of Spring.

A longtime Bolinas resident, Herman died on May 15.

Subject: Recommended Roofer

Rains are coming. Rudy Reyes is an excellent roofer. When we installed solar panels, he did the necessary reroofing at about half the cost of other bids, and did an excellent job. He also did some creative roofing in replacing 30-year-old flat skylights a few months ago. His uncle and his son work with him. I recommend him highly. He works for a roofing contractor during the week and on his own on weekends. His number is 415-250-3352

Bolinas Lagoon North End Project: Public Meeting 9/29

The draft Conceptual Design Report for the Bolinas Lagoon North End Project will be discussed at a Bolinas Lagoon Advisory Council (BLAC) Special Meeting on September 29, 2017. The meeting will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., at Audubon Canyon Ranch, Volunteer Canyon, 4800 Highway 1, Stinson Beach.

The public is invited to attend. At this meeting the BLAC will be asked to provide a recommendation about the project to the Marin County Board of Supervisors. The project's objectives are to alleviate chronic flooding of Marin County and State roadways and improve traffic safety, improve the function of Lewis and Wilkins Creek, enhance riparian and wetland habitats, and allow for future expansion of Bolinas Lagoon as sea level rises.

Dear Friends,

We are excited to host the biggest Bolinas Book Exchange & Commons Event and Fundraiser yet! It's a big push to keep the Book Exchange afloat and to continue developing the Commons as a community space available for events, meetings, classes, screenings, markets, artist residencies, coffee and more. Please come support this effort by celebrating with us at Big Mesa Farmstead and find out what's in store.

Tickets are $35 of tax deductible good vibes and important investment in our community. They are available at the Hearsay Office this Monday, Wednesday and Friday and online at bolinascommons.eventbrite.com, the big event is THIS SATURDAY September 16 5-9p at Big Mesa Farmstead. Music by the talented and amazing harpist Mary Lattimore, Alex Bleeker and Friends, and Jeff Manson. Silent auction. Food & drink, available for purchase, all locally sourced with love.

Thank you for your support,
Alana and the Bolinas Book Exchange & Commons Family

PERFORMING THIS SUNDAY

At the Silk Road House in Berkeley I'll tell two wild stories. Three other tellers round out the bill. 3-5 pm 1944 University Ave. $10.

Bolinas escapes heat wave for Labor Day

By Mark Prado
mprado@marinij.com
@MarkPrado1 on Twitter

Clouds and a major cooldown in temperatures showed up for the annual Bolinas Labor Day Street Party and Barbecue to benefit the town's community center.

Given the oppressive heat the region experienced over the weekend, Monday's weather was far from a bad thing for the event.

"I'm so happy, because if it was burning hot everyone would be at the beach," said Lia Sabbatini, general manager of the community center, as light breeze moved tablecloths at an eating area dotted with food booths. "This is what I wanted. Whoo-hoo!"

Later in the day, the National Weather Service even reported a few sprinkles around Marin from the remnants of a Baja storm. Temperatures will continue to drop Tuesday before settling into the 70s and 80s for the rest of the week, said Steve Anderson, a meteorologist with the weather service.

"That high pressure system is moving out and being replaced by ocean breezes," he said. "We won't see any more of that extreme heat anytime soon."

The Bolinas street party is a tradition more than 40 years old. A silent auction, two stages of live music and an abundance of food were among the festivities.

"It's our biggest event for the community center," said June

McAdams, who was working at the dessert booth. "We have a lot of locals coming by, but we get people from the outside too."

McAdams and two associates presided over colorfully sprinkled cupcakes, apple pies, chocolate chip cookies and other goodies as people walked around the grounds, checking out the sweets with wide eyes.

"Everything is donated," McAdams said, proudly. "It's all baked here in town."

More than 1,000 plates of food were expected to be sold by the end of the day, including tamales, barbecued food and blueberry cobbler.

The silent auction featured surfboards, art, kayaks, vintage glass and ceramics among other items, all on display in the community center.

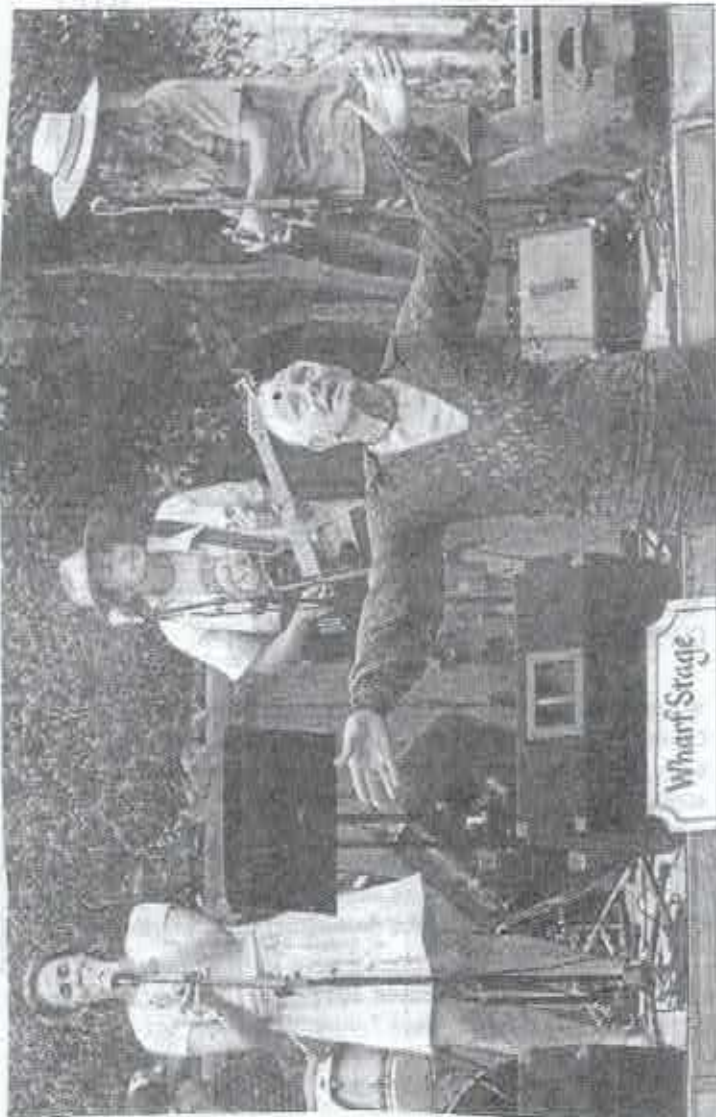

"This helps us. It's a non-profit community center," said Sabbatini, adding she hoped the event would raise $20,000 and that the work of 100 volunteers was indispensable. "We need the funds to keep classes and activities that we offer at a reasonable price."

Reggae shows, theater productions, after-school programs, yoga sessions, food banks, meetings and a monthly breakfast for those in need are some of the events held at the busy hub.

"This pretty nice," Bolinas resident Meg Simonds said of the weather. "We close the street, there is music all day. It's quite a community event and I'm glad the clouds are here. You can dance and not swelter."

P.O. BO PHOTOS!

Hello: Wanted to let you know that I have ventured out and displayed some of my photographs on the artist wall inside the Bolinas Post Office for the month of September (with big mounting-the-show help from my husband Charlie). Post Office is open 8am - 4pm. Blessings, Ayn Plant

I love this picture of Christmas in Bolinas. This was our first Christmas I believe in town 2012. Amber Hines, her daughter Rain-Noelle, Lia's daughter Mikaela, Santa being serenaded by Stu-Art Chapman, Lia Sabbatini and Michael Pinkham. Magically dancing from the Bolinas Super Market to the Community Center, up the ramp to Santa's Corner, filled with such love.

BOLINAS: At 12:17 p.m. a novelist working on a murder mystery wanted to talk to deputies about the town's "own set of laws" and how they coincide with county laws and law enforcement.

MOUNT TAM: At 4:22 p.m. a tree was hanging low.

BOLINAS: At 2:46 a.m. a man asked deputies to remove from his presence a young woman he'd met that night.

BOLINAS: At 2:50 p.m. someone said the tide was rising and people were being "smashed against the wall and babies are being swept away."

PUBLIC EAVESDROPPING

"That's the lake? You mean I just wasted 3.5 miles of my life for that?"

Teenage boy to his dad, overheard at Bass Lake near Bolinas by Beattie Mae

BOLINAS: At 8:23 p.m. a woman said a bearded man drove by in a maroon van, rolled down his window and asked if it was okay to sleep there.

MOUNT TAM: At 8:43 p.m. someone saw a column of smoke.

BOLINAS: At 8:54 p.m. someone reported a suspicious black pickup.

BOLINAS: At 7:28 a.m. the caretaker of a property found a man with shaggy hair who appeared to have slept there, though he claimed he'd just run out of gas.

County to improve Agate Beach Trail as part of inclusive access plan

By Anna Guth

Marin County Parks began a $99,000 restoration project on the Agate Beach Trail in Bolinas last week, part of an initiative to improve access to the county's trail system. Beginning last week, the trailhead leading to Agate Beach is closed to the public from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays only. Construction, which is likely to last around a month, will include drainage improvements, resurfacing to level the pathway and the installation of box steps on a portion of trail close to the beach. According to the parks department's senior open space planner, Craig Richardson, "the trail shouldn't look that different once the work has been completed, and the project will address a maintenance issue at the trailhead that was especially difficult last winter." Six other trails will be improved, including at White House Pool and the Roy's Redwoods Meadow Trail in West Marin. The projects are part of the county's inclusive access plan, which was adopted in August 2016 by the Marin County Open Space District's board of directors. The plan included an evaluation of the existing inventory of pedestrian trails and recommendations for ways to increase the equitability of access—including the potential use of service animals, mobility devices and visitor amenities. The plan is funded by Measure A, which since 2013 has funded $11.5 million in park and open space infrastructure repairs, vegetation management, conservation and public programs. But at least for Bolinas resident William McGovern, the Agate Beach project is "unnecessary." In a letter published in the Hearsay News last week, Mr. McGovern expressed concern that the county would "likely advertise the newly refurbished trail, possibly with clear directions, thereby adding to the traffic on Elm [Street] and the presence of people at the beach and the trail." A new sign will indeed be erected, Mr. Richardson said, posting information about the trail's new width and gradient.
