Miwok Music Workshop this Sat. Sept. 17, 2-5 pm at Kule Loklo

Join us for the Miwok Song & Instrument Workshop this Saturday 2-5 pm at Kule Loklo in Point Reyes National Seashore, led by Miwok storyteller Sky Road Webb. Participants will learn to sing songs in Miwok language and will choose a simple percussion instrument to make – either a Shatum (clapper stick) or a Lawik (bullroarer). Instruction and all materials will be provided.

Sky Road Webb is a Tomales Bay Miwok descendant who leads Coast Miwok songs and prayers at celebrations throughout Northern California, and he was featured in the 2014 Mount Tamalapais documentary The Invisible Peak.

Location: Kule Loklo Miwok Village is a short walk from Bear Valley Visitor's Center in Point Reyes National Seashore, 1 Bear Valley Road in Point Reyes Station.

Cost: $30 in advance, $40 day of workshop. Sign up and get more info about the Miwok Music Project at www.miwokmusic.org

The Art of Vitality Tuesday, September
13, 7:00 PM Join Anna O'Malley and James Stark in an exploration of human health within an ecological framework. Weaving science and experience with interpersonal connection, Anna and James will present how to create an ecology that will enable you to be fully expressed in optimal health and vitality.
We'll envision what this might look like in our West Marin community.

4th District Supervisor Race

It seems to me that if you were a supporter of DBOC and were pissed at the NPS for their behavior during the whole procedure you would look at who is supporting Dominic Grossi. A very well put together 16 page newsletter shows both Kevin and Nancy Lunny as well as Gary Giacomini, Steve Kinsey & Phyllis Faber as signing supporters.

That says it all for our family.

PACIFIC COAST

Along Calif. 1, Stinson Beach boasts a 3-mile stretch of white beach that's safe for swimming; the village makes a good stop for sandwiches. Just north at Bolinas Lagoon you may see egrets and waterfowl, or spy harbor seals hauled out on Pickleweed Island. Bird-watchers might observe any of 115 species at Audubon Canyon Ranch, a 1,000-acre preserve on the lagoon where great blue herons and egrets nest in spring at the tops of redwood trees. At the north end of Bolinas Lagoon try to find the road to Bolinas; for decades, residents have sought anonymity by taking down the signs marking the turnoff to their town. It's a tranquil hideout with an organic-hippie-artistic-countercultural spirit, although it is now becoming upscale.

BOLINAS DESCARGES

for Peter Warshall

David Meltzer

no. 3 of 100 copies, printed at Impart Ink, an errant studio, as part of ONWARD! A Celebration and Benefit for the poet, at Bird & Beckett Books, San Francisco, on 9 November, 2014

"Bolinas Descarges" first appeared in Stunt Man (Omerta Publications, 2013).

David Meltzer and his wife and fellow poet Julie Rogers did a lovely reading in the Stinson library last evening. Both have lived in Bolinas, David in the late 60s/early 70s and Julie in 1979/80. "I always come back and am happy that it looks the same – no new buildings!" said Julie. "It's changing otherwise, I hear, a sign of the times," added David. "But let's not go there lest we start frothing at the mouth." –(Steve Heilig)

from Bark: A Polemic, by David Meltzer, Capra Press, 1972):

In Bolinas town-dogs hang around like dandies, hang-out like candystore cut-ups, lost for action, always under foot.

In their eyes the signal: What's happening? Que pasa? Vas machstu? Where's the action? In Bolinas town-dogs are bored & thoroughly collectivized. They are free dogs, liberated from masters, they eat from house to house. Low to the ground to imitate a small dog they eat out of the smaller dog's backyard bowl until small dog's master hits big dog in the rib-cage with a chip of broken glass nobody will sew up.

Last week a young woman hit a young man's dog & the young man said he would cure the dog with Black Magic & cursed the woman with Black Magic & told her not to touch his animal because all women are polluted & he didnt want his animal to be polluted. The dog remained an attentive audience. He was uninjured.

Bark is what us dogs do here in Dogtown
also shit on sidewalks doormats porches

wherever new shoes walk fearless.
Bark is what us dogs do here in Dogtown
it's a dog's life
we cant live without you.
Mirror you we are you.
Beneath your foot or on the garage roof.
You teach us speech bark bark
for biscuits we dance for you.
You push us thru hoops
& see our eyes as your eyes
but you got the guns the gas the poison
all of it.
Bark is what us dogs do here in Dogtown.
