Climate

In this heat and marathon drought the seasons have gotten confused.

Two tarantulas crossing the road this morning, looking for love as they do this time of year, although we're actually just into the fall, while the struggling young oak in the yard, which normally breaks its buds in February when it's normally raining, brought out its new leaves just a month ago in early September. How can this be, and what will the tree do now when winter arrives?

The Burning Man Temples and Beyond

Best and his crews built the first Burning Man Temple in 2000, which marked the beginning of a new and profound ritual for the tens of thousands of participants who attend Burning Man each year. After days of writing prayers on the structures, of affixing offerings from one's life such as pictures, paintings, etc., or of leaving the ashes of loved ones, etc. the Temple were burned on Sunday nights. Best has done other major temple projects in Derry/Londonderry in Northern Ireland, London's Burning festival, San Francisco, Detroit, and elsewhere.

In this presentation and discussion with The New School Host Steve Heilig, David will talk about his efforts and inspirations, with visual images of this striking and even awe-inspiring work.

Good Afternoon:

I know it was not "big" news but I was wondering about the fire on the electrical pole this last Saturday at the Commonwealth Conference Center. My children and I spotted the smoke and alerted the staff. Once 911 was called, we did not stay around, but my 6 year-old son was wondering about the cause of the fire. Do you have any information you would be able to share with my curious son?

The Great Broadside Swipe Celebrating the Life and Work of Joanne Kyger (1934–2017)

Commonweal Retreat Center
Bolinas Calif. July 22, 2017.

(an excerpt from a long "review" of Joanne's memorial; the entire thing found at:

<https://thenewblackbartpoetrysociety.wordpress.com/2017/09/04/the-great-broadside-swipe/>

by Steven Lavoie

Decades passed, yet she persisted. At least once during every conversation I had with her, Joanne Kyger would prod me to put together another Black Bart Poetry Society convention somewhere in Bolinas. She wanted to have one in Bolinas: a really good idea, in theory. Someday the time would come.

That time came on July 22, 2017 at the Commonweal Retreat Center in Bolinas. Sadly, Joanne would not have the opportunity to experience it, nor would the hundreds of participants, or the organizers, have a clue that they were a party to it. Billed as "a celebration" of Kyger's "life and work," this second Black Bart Poetry Society convention had little in common with the first, held 35 years before in San Francisco. This time the site was rural, with an infrastructure marginally equipped to handle the throng of fellow poets, neighbors, former newspaper colleagues and associates of Kyger's, and possibly some curiosity seekers clued by an announcement on the Internet.

A convoy of mostly fuel-efficient, hybrid or all-electric cars heading coastward on the Mesa Road out of Bolinas converged on Commonweal Retreat Center where the now defunct RCA Corp. once delivered radio broadcasts across the Pacific. After staking out parking spots along the grassy, elevated edges of the long, level roadway leading to the venue, celebrants and unknowing conventioners trod the gravel surface under extraordinary sunshine reminiscent of the recurring scene in Buñuel's Discreet Charm Of The Bourgeoisies. Some silently grieved, others panted in exertion, still others engaged in conversation while others secretly listened, hearing tales of past encounters with the singular figure to whom they had all gathered to pay last respects. One octogenarian couple debated details of a particular gathering long ago at what sounded like the Russian Hill home of Margot Patterson Doss, where Kyger and her colleagues would often congregate during the waning years of Beat-era San Francisco. Another group was overheard recalling the wry sarcasm of Kyger's remarks during a more recent colloquy of local poets held somewhere in the more densely populated tracts of Marin County, a dreadful but obligatory gig, no doubt, especially from a Black Bart Poetry Society perspective. Everybody, it seemed, had a story to tell about Joanne Kyger.

BOB MARLEY NIGHT SATURDAY DOWNTOWN

Dreamlike the lights have a dark smoky glow and the street is filled with groups of people under twenty. Car radios groups of boys, groups of girls, three sheriff's cars. Like spring break at Fort Lauderdale, but here everyone goes home before morning.

At the Community Center the reggae is authentic, easy and slow to dance to. The group, from Mendocino, has served 'jerked' chicken for dinner. I go around back to see if any barbecues are still set up. The plaza is filled with vans, their own encampment.

I walk up and start a conversation with a man and woman cooking. Like, Lovely evening, how lucky you can park in our plaza, which we don't usually allow, don't you love our

Stop cell towers on every block! Stop SB 649!

THE AT&TVERIZONT-MOBILESPRINTASAUROS

emfsafetynetwork.org eon3emfblog.net

SB 649 would force installation of cell towers into neighborhoods and countrysides throughout California. How many? Likely one every 1000 feet. SB 649 would eliminate local control and public input.

Mercury News Editorial: Gov. Brown, veto the bill that lets rich telecoms use public property practically free — September 26, 2017

The California Legislature wants to give telecom companies a nice big gift: at least $30 million a year, and perhaps billions of dollars in savings at the direct expense of cities that both rely on the money and use their current leverage to negotiate improved coverage for poor neighborhoods.

Gov. Jerry Brown — or, perhaps more to the point, former Oakland Mayor Jerry Brown — has to stop it. He should veto SB 649, which gives telecoms carte blanche to put their “small cell” antennas on any public property — street lights, public buildings — with a token fee, instead of negotiating with cities for the use of taxpayer-owned facilities.

It’s an outrageous giveaway to companies whose profits are in the tens of billions. And it’s a slap in the face to California residents and taxpayers, who shouldn’t be forced to allow access to public property without just compensation. It will raise serious liability issues, but lawmakers left that up to cities to resolve, even though they took away cities’ bargaining power.

The idea is that this break will enable telecoms to fast-track communication improvements and reach more people. But telecoms, unlike nearly all California cities, are rolling in money. This is why lawmakers, looking to their own political futures, favor them.

In cities like San Jose, removing cities’ right to negotiate placement and compensation will skewer current programs to expand and improve broadband access in poor neighborhoods where telecoms have little interest in

Dear Governor Jerry Brown, We ask you to veto Senate Bill 649. We don’t want unlimited cell towers in California. Peer reviewed studies show health effects of cell tower radiation include: fatigue, headaches, sleep problems, anxiety, ringing in the ears, learning, memory and heart problems, increased cancer risk, and more. Studies show radiation harms nature, trees, birds, and bees. 300 cities, 47 counties, and dozens of health, environment, and consumer groups oppose SB 649. Make California a leader by using safer, faster and more secure fiber optics. VETO SB 649! Sincerely,

Postcards with this image & message available from Mary Beth Brangan, EON, 868-1900 mbrangan@gmail.com or online: <http://emfsafetynetwork.org/we-will-mail-this-postcard-for-you-tell-governor-brown-to-veto-sb-649/> For more info on this issue: EON3EMFblog.net investing. Companies can make more money beefing up service in the Almaden Valley than in Alum Rock, or in Lamorinda rather than the flatlands of Oakland.

As the Greenlining Institute, which works for racial and economic justice, says: “SB 649 will not close the digital divide. Instead, it will allow phone and broadband providers to override community decisions about how those communities use public space.”

No wonder 300 cities and 47 counties opposed the bill. So did several labor organizations and, by the way, the California Department of Finance:

“Finance opposes this bill,” says its report. “While statewide uniform rules can help the expansion of new technologies, this bill goes too far by usurping city and county zoning authority for infrastructure development, and it potentially imposes reimbursable, state-mandated costs on cities and counties.”

By all but giving away public property to for-profit companies, the bill will limit cities’ and counties’ ability to locate their own communication equipment, including police and fire systems, and equipment from corporate partners helping to equalize Internet access.

So it’s up to the governor. The former mayor. Brown understands the struggle of poor communities and the importance of local control over public property. Get out the veto pen, Governor. We’re counting on you. <http://www.mercurynews.com/2017/09/25/editorial-gov-brown-veto-the-bill-that-lets-rich-telecoms-use-public-property-practically-free/>
