Republican leaders visit Bolinas, desperately searching for a viable Presidential candidate

SHOCKER: LOCAL DOG NOMINATED FOR UNITED STATES PRESIDENT!

BOLINAS, CA – Residents of this beautiful bucolic reclusive coastal village, and the entire world for that matter, were amazed today to learn that the Republican party, dismayed at being unable to locate anybody remotely qualified to serve as President, had nominated a longtime local canine known as "Arfy" as their Presidential candidate. "We finally located a candidate whose IQ exceeds the combined brainpower of all the human candidates combined!" they exulted. Arfy himself, accompanied by his newly-appointed bodyguard, a very large but serene husky-type named Smokey, issued a brief statement, saying he would institute socialized veterinary medicine, "biscuit stamps" modeled on the human food stamp program, conversion of all military facilities into dog food factories, and a law requiring all humans to carry and use poop bags at all times. Rumors arose that Arfy had changed his name from Barfy in order to seem more presidential; Cats nationwide were nervous, but Arfy pledged interspecies peace as well. President Obama, sniffing the writing on the wall, announced he would not run for a second term, but offered his own pet pup, appropriately named "Bo", as a vice-presidential candidate. "That's an interesting idea," replied President-elect Arfy. But I'll still have to sniff Bo's butt."

LOCAL ACTRESS RETURNS TO THE SCREEN IN THE DRAMA SERIES 'RIVER RIDGE'

Signy Coleman, a Bolinas native, will debut a new drama series in which she not only stars in but shares the title of Executive Producer. 'River Ridge' embraces the future of artistic entertainment airing exclusively on the Internet. The interwoven kaleidoscope of the residents of a small east coast town and their familiar and relatable circumstances are explored in the socially conscious drama series. Coleman portrays "Sharon Reeves" a devoted mother, daughter, sister, and friend, who is forced to confront the history of dysfunction that she shares with her distant sister. Created by Tyler Ford and featuring an award winning cast ranging from daytime, primetime, reality, and film, 'River Ridge' premieres Friday, January 13 at 6pm PT / 9pm ET on The SFN Entertainment Network - SFNTV.COM.

A Winter Spare the Air Alert has been issued for Wednesday, January 11, 2012 in the Bay Area. Wood burning is banned both indoors and outdoors, for the full 24 hours.

Air quality in the Bay Area is forecast to be unhealthy. It is illegal for Bay Area residents to burn wood or other solid fuels in fireplaces, wood stoves and inserts, pellet stoves, outdoor fire-pits, or other wood-burning devices.

Winter air pollution is mainly caused by particulates or soot pollution from wood smoke. Smoke from wood-burning fires is linked to illnesses such as asthma, bronchitis and lung disease, and is especially harmful for children and the elderly.

For more information about the Wood Burning Rule, or to check before you burn, visit www.sparetheair.org or call 1-877-4NO-BURN.

You can also call 1-800-430-1515 and register to receive automatic phone calls when a Winter Spare the Air Alert has been called.

To see the current air quality forecast visit www.sparetheair.org.

Visit the Apple App Store to download our FREE Spare the Air iPhone application for alert notifications, local air quality forecasts, podcasts and several tools to help reduce air pollution.

Thank you for doing your part to Spare the Air!

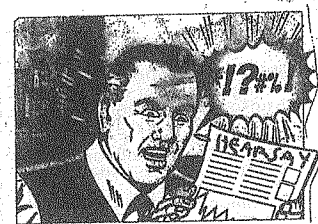

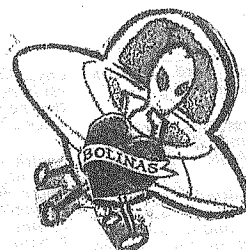

This AirAlert is provided by your Bay Area Air Quality Management District.

If I'm not mistaken, everyone seems to go back to where they came from, ending up right where they began. Our beloved cat died today. She liked to sit on my head during zazen back when she was a child. I bow to her magnificence beside which all churches and temples are privy holes.

GEORGE WINSTON

Saturday, January 14, 8 PM

Tickets: $32, $30 seniors, $15 teens

George Winston grew up mainly in Montana, and also spent his later formative years in Mississippi and Florida. During this time, his favorite music was instrumental rock and instrumental R&B, including Floyd Cramer, the Ventures, Booker T & the MGs, Jimmy Smith, and many more. Inspired by R&B, jazz, blues, and rock (especially The Doors), George began playing organ in 1967. In 1971 he switched to the acoustic piano after hearing recordings from the 1920s and the 1930s by the legendary stride pianists Thomas "Fats" Waller and the late Teddy Wilson. In addition to working on stride piano, he also at this time came up with his own style of melodic instrumental music on solo piano, called "folk piano." His latest solo piano release is "Love Will Come—The Music of Vince Guaraldi, Vol. 2" (released 2/2/10), which features compositions by the late jazz pianist, including pieces from the Peanuts® TV specials.

There is no more normal

Dear Editor,

"There is no more normal" means that the norms that have held our belief systems about reality in place are going to fall apart in 2012. My dictionary's definition of norm is: "an authoritarian standard; a principle of right action binding upon the members of a group and serving to guide, control or regulate proper and acceptable behavior." Out with the old norms, in with the new.

If you want to be a player in 2012, you will be among those creating the new norms. Otherwise, you will be defending the indefensible. We have come to the grand finale of the old order, no matter what language you want to give it. Some of us call it "the error in time," meaning the indoctrination into a mindset about time that separated us from nature and the sublime intelligence of the synchronic order.

Others of us label the old order the patriarchy, identified as a belief system subjugating nature and the feminine. Or maybe what we see in history is the insatiable appetite of materialism organized through capitalism and money, finally producing a grotesque caricature of haves and have-nots: billionaires in castles while impoverished people sleep in streets.

The seeds of our present day malaise were sewn around 3000 BC, when so-called civilization began. Writing began. Numbers began. A calendar based on dividing the year into 12 began. The date 3114 BC began the cycle of the Mayan Long Count Calendar that ends on December 21, 2012. 5125 years of the Cycle of History is coming to its natural end this year. In 2013, sources say we are destined to achieve Galactic Synchronization and enter the Psychozoic Era, a time of super-consciousness that we can barely imagine. We will no longer see ourselves as separate from nature and from the creative whole that is our source and what we serve. We will Occupy the Noosphere.

Knowing that, the best way to make 2012 the greatest year of your life is to get aboard the new energy that is coming in and release all attachment to the structures that have defined the old reality. Be prepared to let the institutions of the old order go when destabilization sets in. Become interested in the new experiments that are percolating and get involved. Occupy is one of the big waves anticipating what is coming. Occupy is a rising tide that will fill every nook and cranny of the present political, social and economic system.

If you are critical or skeptical of the Occupy movement, you are standing outside it and seeing it from an old paradigm perspective. Occupy is anything we want it to be. It simply means Be Here Now. There is no formula that is Occupy; it is infinitely expandable. Every one of us has something we care about that we can empower through the Occupy energy. The person who babysits so her friend can go to a meeting is as essential as the high profile organizers and activists. Ask your heart, find your place, make a commitment.

If you are alive now, you incarnated to be part of this transformation. We are meant to find ourselves in new norms of cooperation, mutual understanding and support that are not attached to the reward and punishment formula of the old dynamic. 2012 is a radical departure from everything that has conditioned us to fear for our survival. The old norms promoted hoarding, greed, suspicion and selfishness. Our inner work is to shed all this programming and bring forth our deeper, truer selves. We are here to help each other. The rest will follow.

A Power Failure in Bolinas

Strong rains bring these modes of light to failure

I read by church candle in front of the loud window

it flings light like water from hands shook dry against the alcove walls, and roof

Outside, the deep textured wind starts up then disappears and comes back again with your head turned away and a darker more silent idea of space surrounds us, inside of ourselves.

Coastal Health Alliance New Hours

Days of Operation: We will be changing days of operation in Stinson Beach and Bolinas effective January 30th, 2012. Stinson Beach Community Health Center will be open Monday and Thursday from 9am to 5pm. Bolinas Community Health Center will be open Tuesday - Friday from 9am to 5pm. Residents will still have access to primary care services five days a week from our qualified physician staff of Dr. Mike Witte, Dr. Kristin Kalmbacher and Dr. Anna O'Malley.

Our Bolinas and Stinson Beach Providers:

Dr. Anna O'Malley is a Board Certified Family Practice and Integrative Medicine physician.

Anna is committed to providing a holistic approach to healing and wellness, and is particularly interested in the healing power of food, movement and mind-body medicine. Anna is currently conducting a Senior Wellness series of classes in San Geronimo Valley. Visit our website for more information on the series. Beginning in February 2012, Anna O'Malley will see patients in Bolinas on Wednesdays, Stinson Beach on Thursdays and Point Reyes Station on Fridays.

Dr. Kristin Kalmbacher is a Board Certified Family Practice physician with a special interest in acupuncture and integrative health. A Bolinas resident since 2003, Kristin's interest in health care developed from a love of being physically active and a desire to assist others in caring for their bodies. Beginning in February 2012, Kristin Kalmbacher will see patients in Stinson Beach on Mondays and Bolinas on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Dr. Mike Witte, Medical Director will continue to see patients in Bolinas every other Tuesday.

The Hipster Haven of the Beat Bohemians

by Mike Marino

San Francisco...the grand dame of the Pacific Coast. She is as elegant and sophisticated as Ingrid Bergman was in her love scenes with Humphrey Bogart in Casablanca. Like Ingrid, San Francisco is a class act, bridging the gap from sophisticated urban life to the laid back eclectic nature of Marin County to the north of the city. The key to getting to Marin is the Golden Gate Bridge. As a bridge, she is a magnificent, heavy metal highway to the pot of rustic and artistic gold at the end of her bright sunset orange rainbow. The Marin Headlands greet you with sweeping scenery of the ocean, all that lies in the Bay, and of course, a panoramic display of San Francisco spread out before you - a brilliant painting of the urbane and the urban. As you exit that world and enter the world of Marin you have effectively stepped through the looking glass to a culture all it's own, and damn it...they like it that way.

Marin is all class and culture, some of that culture being counter, as it should be. There is also a rustic edge to it that allows a person to enjoy the best of the outdoors that the Bay Area has to offer from kayaking on the same oceanic highways where Grey Whales migrate and sea lions bark defiantly on the shores. It's also a landscape seascape painting of redwoods, majestic Mt. Tam and the Pt. Reyes National Seashore.

Then too there is Sausalito. Home to a massive annual arts festival that registers a resounding 10 on the Richter Scale of sophistication! A houseboat community of temperamental artists mix delightfully with the "land-lubbers" who go about their daily lives, some as commuters to the city across the bridge to earn a living, but all in all, you can tell Sausalito Pride! In Marin County, if Sausalito is sassy, then Bolinas is the Hipster Haven of the Beat Boheme - a hidden habitat of mythic proportions tucked away in the region - the most eclectic enclave for those missing in action from the Sixties.

Bolinas

The Bolinians jealousy guard their privacy. It's as though you've stumbled onto a secret society of Knights Templar whose task it is to guard the secrets of the Holy Grail. The community is an outgrowth of Sixties counter culture and the reclusive residents relish their privacy and their environment. So much so, that this whimsical group of environmentalists, writers, poets and surfing artists have this habit of removing the sign that points the way to Bolinas and posting it elsewhere. When I first went on my holy quest to locate this "lost city" of bohemian gold, I saw the sign pointing the way to the town off of Highway One near Stinson Beach. I turned left as directed and ended up at a dead end that was also the backyard of a local resident, far removed from Bolinas. He happened to be outside and came over to the car. I mentioned I was looking for Bolinas and followed the sign posted on the Highway. He looked at me, smiled and said, "They did it again!"

I eventually did find the town, had a couple of brews at Smiley's Schooner Pub and bought the Smiley's T-Shirt that I wear with pride today. It's like winning an Olympic Medal. You find Bolinas, venture in, and damn it, you're part of an exclusive club. Like getting to wear a Super Bowl Ring! Not all is verboten in Bolinas. It is home to the Marin-Bolinas Botanical Gardens, which is a wonderland of succulents encompassing over 14 acres and it is open on weekends. There are over 2,000 species included including the Children's Garden, and numerous greenhouses.

The town also boasts a fine arts museum that is the envy of the area, and shades of Haight Ashbury in the Sixties. There is also a free store where free clothing is distributed from a building decorated gaily with bright rainbows. In the Sixties I volunteered time at the Free Store in the Haight as well as at Glide Memorial where "runaways" were given assistance and help in getting settled.

The Islands

Islands? Islands? You want Islands? San Francisco Bay has three of them. Angel Island is by far the largest of them and is just off the coast of the Tiburon Peninsula in Marin County. (The other two islands are Alcatraz and Yerba Buena, which, by the way, was the first name of San Francisco and means, not so ironically, "good herb!") Angel Island was known in the past as the favorite locale for duels where two gents had perceived they had been wronged, perhaps rightfully, but none the less, ten paces, turn and fire! Today the island is a wildlife refuge and retreat from city life with ample opportunities for sea kayaking, mountain biking, hiking, backpacking and camping. One of the kayak tours includes a catered lunch, which is very Marin-ish!

Pt. Reyes National Seashore

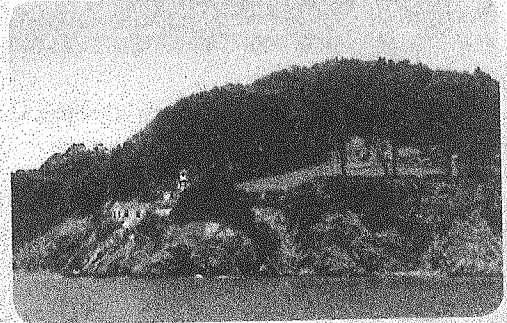

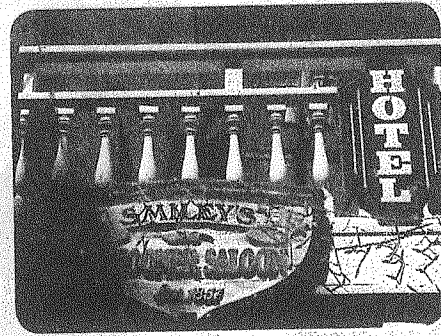

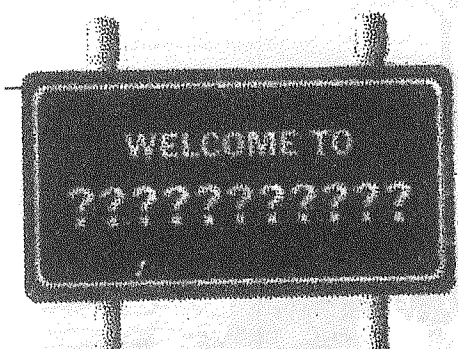

Pt. Reyes National Seashore has more plants, animals and marine life than a three ring circus, and, for those who imbibe in watching our fine feathered friends, is a bird watchers paradise. Its rich Miwok Indian history is well preserved and rumor has it Sir Francis Drake landed here in the late 1500s. Bear in mind the exact location of his landing is unknown and there are so many areas that make that boast that Drake sightings are more prevalent than Elvis sightings.

The Pt. Reyes lighthouse was built in 1870 and retired from active service by the Coast Guard in 1975 when, like so many lighthouses in the country, automation took over and the era of romance of the light-keeper was finito! Tours are available and well worth the trip. Tripping and trekking are two favorite pastimes along the seashore and you would be remiss if you did not take to the Pt. Reyes Hiking Trail. You can obtain information at the Bear Valley Visitor Center. The region is a backcountry camping paradise for the rugged individualist who enjoys the ruggedness of the Northern California coast with it's crashing waves, thick as soup fog banks and rejuvenating winds.

Some of the wildlife you'll run into in the area (not including those at Smiley's Schooner Saloon), include elk, deer and seals. There are ample stretches of Pacific coast to explore and hike along for the son of a beach in all of us, along with bicycle paths to two-wheel it or saddle up and giddy up for a coastal horseback riding experience.

Bolinas and the Marin Peninsula - a flashback to the Sixties? Youbetcha! Get aboard the magic bus...it's a trip you'll not soon forget!

This Duck Is A Party Animal

April 30, 1990 | By Red - Orlando Sentinel

Things must be getting bad in the Soviet Union. Now the ducks are defecting. Bird fanciers in Bolinas, Calif., went into a tizzy when a Soviet duck, a garganey, was spotted in a pond in the company of an American blue wing teal. Birders, about 300 of whom gathered to gaze, speculated the little Russian duck must have somehow landed on the wrong side of the Bering Sea.

There is no doubt about it being a communist duck. After all, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it is a duck. That's what they said in the Joe McCarthy era anyway. Maybe if he

An Apology From the Gods

This is apparently an online novel; Full thing at: http://www.scottseely.net/ScottSeely/An_Apology_From_the_Gods

Chapter 1: The Arrival

There is a place where the wind and rain of life blow off the ocean and the fog of confusion drips from the trees. People there look to the gods for guidance and stability, and the gods use people to meet whatever needs gods might have. When the sunshine breaks through, the blue ocean stretches away to the horizon.

Anthony Young stood in that place and was glad he had arrived. He would shed his youthful follies, make his first mark on the world, and get a girlfriend.

At least, that was his plan.

Anthony stood on the main street in Bolinas, California, looking at the mix of locals and college students who passed him in the bright afternoon sun. On his left, the street ran to the Bolinas Lagoon and then curved out of sight toward the Pacific Ocean. A group of students carrying coolers and blankets went by, heading for the beach. To the right, the road out of town disappeared past the stores of a strip mall. A banner hung near the stores. It read, "Close It Down! No Malls in Bolinas!".

The Coast Cafe beckoned invitingly from across the street, but Anthony's eyes were drawn up the hill behind it. At the top loomed the Temple of the god Bolinas, the town of Bolinas's very own god. The temple wall stood blank and gray.

Anthony pulled a map from his backpack. He was studying it when a voice behind him said, "You have business in town, friend?" Anthony turned to face a tall man in a black and purple collarless jacket with gold buttons. The man had a short beard and wore a religious pendant on a chain around his neck. He said to Anthony, "Why are you sneaking around here?"

"I'm not sneaking," said Anthony. "I'm lost."

"Sure you are. You keep going back and forth, checking everything out."

"I'd like to check out a street sign, but there aren't any. I'm trying to get up there." Anthony waved his map at the hill.

"And you need a map to do it? You should be careful. People around here don't take to strangers."

"You're kidding, right?" said Anthony. "I mean, this is a college town."

"And not everyone thinks that's a good thing."

"Really? Well, I'm not here for college."

"No matter," said the man. He moved forward, forcing Anthony to step back. "We don't want spies poking around."

"Are you nuts? Who am I spying for?"

"Olema's capable of anything. And watch your tongue — you're speaking to a priest of Bolinas."

"Look, I've got family here." Anthony held up the map. "And I need to find an apartment building — the Aphorhp in Bolinas. I think maybe if I go back through town and up this road..." He pointed at the map. "I'll get there. Is that right?"

"Each man achieves grace by making his own way, and you alone must decide your route. Thus speaks Bolinas. And if you're involved with the Aphorhp, I'd advise you to find a route out of town." The priest walked away toward the lagoon, striding down the middle of the street.

"Wow," Anthony thought, looking at the priest's back. "I hope that's not the way it's going to be. I had hopes for this place." He checked the map again and turned in the opposite direction.

As he walked back through town, he followed the sidewalk under an overhanging roof and across the porch of Smiley's Hotel, where a young man sat in a straight chair. The man grinned as he tilted his chair back against the wall. "Get any help there?" he asked.

Anthony shook his head. "Nope. According to Bolinas, I must make my own way."

"That's Atwood for you. Sometimes he won't help an egg find a frying pan."

"He was awfully hostile and suspicious."

"Yeah? I guess he's stirring things up again. What're you looking for?"

"I'm trying to get to..." Anthony gestured vaguely up the hill. "There's an apartment building up there somewhere."

"You mean the Aphorhp?"

"That's it."

"You dating one of those girls?"

"Not me. Which girls?"

"That place is filled with them," said the man. "Good-looking, too, though I suppose it depends on your taste."

"All girls, huh? Mind if I sit down?"

"Help yourself."

Anthony put down his backpack and pulled over another straight-backed chair. He sat and held out his hand. "Anthony Young."

"Rafael Fern."

Imitating Rafael, Anthony tipped his chair back against the wall, but the chair legs slipped. His head hit the wall, and with a scrape, clatter, and yell, he landed on his back, legs propped up by the chair seat.

For a moment he was stunned, but then Rafael stood over him, chuckling and offering a hand. "You all right? I know I shouldn't laugh."

But Anthony was laughing, too, even as he rubbed the back of his head. "That's OK. I do stuff like that a lot." He set his chair upright.

BOLINAS: At 4:37 p.m. someone asked deputies to check on a woman whom the caller said was "in a valley looking at bats."
